Hundreds Feared Dead in Flood

Irgun Asks Soviet Aid To Stamp Out 'Aggression'

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 30 (AP).—Irgun Zvai Leumi appealed to Russia tonight for help in stamping out the "Arab-British aggression" in the Holy Land.

In an official radio broadcast, the Jewish fighting arm said it was appealing to the Soviet Union as a nation which recognized the new state of Israel and agreed to an exchange of diplomatic representatives.

Irgun charged that Britain, with the help of the United States State Department, put through the United Nations Security Council a proposal of a "Spanish pattern." Irgun added that this pattern would result in banning arms to the Jews, but left ways open for the Arabs to obtain equipment.

This reference was to the Security Council's latest truce proposal. The proposal calls for a four-week period of cease-fire and places an embargo on the shipment of arms and reinforcing personnel into Palestine and the Arab states involved in the Palestine war.

The Irgun broadcast demanded that "the Jews should proclaim that this resolution is illegal and that no peace will prevail in Palestine so long as a British soldier or any other foreign soldier remains on Israel's soil."

The broadcast did not state what form of aid was wanted from Russia.

Arabs Appear Massing For Tel Aviv Attack

Cairo, May 30 (AP).—Jews and Arabs claimed important military conquests in the Holy Land tonight as Arab armies appeared grouping for an onslaught on Tel Aviv.

Military developments occurred swiftly in the Holy Land on a Sunday marked by a Jewish statement that the Arab Legion of Trans-Jordan was planning to use gas in an attack tonight on Jerusalem's new city.

An Israeli government spokesman made the charge in Tel Aviv. Dispatches from Jerusalem gave no confirmation. A telegram filed late this afternoon said Jerusalem was relatively quiet today except for sporadic mortar bombing of the center of town and the Beit Israel quarter.

To Consider Truce Plan

Meanwhile, top-ranking Israeli officials and the Arab League's political committee prepared to consider the United Nations Security Council's latest truce proposal. The Council called on Arabs and Jews last night to agree by 6 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Tuesday on a

3 Training Planes Crash in Florida Swamp; 5 Killed

Stuart, Fla., May 30 (AP).—Four Naval Reserve fliers and a Coast Guardsman were found dead today near three crashed training planes on the edge of the swampy Everglades.

Naval authorities said apparently the three single-engine planes crashed during a violent thunderstorm late yesterday. They were part of a 12-plane formation en route from Birmingham, Ala., to Miami. The flight had landed in Jacksonville for refueling and departed at 5 p. m., EST.

The SNJ, two-place trainers were spread out over a swamp about 7 miles northwest of Stuart.

Lieut. Comdr. Thomas H. Rentz at Southeastern Naval Reserve headquarters in Atlanta said the Navy had no official report yet of the deaths and the four fliers still are listed as missing. He said they are all former combat men.

An unidentified Coast Guard enlisted man was the fifth victim.

Bradley paces the caisson "on the long green meadows"

By Gen. Omar N. Bradley

Chief of Staff, U. S. Army

This is the text of an address delivered by General Bradley yesterday afternoon at Longmeadow, Mass., at Memorial Day reburial of Corpl. Edward K. Wilkin, Company C, 157th Infantry, Forty-fifth Infantry Division, Medal of Honor winner who was killed in action April 18, 1945, in Germany.

HERE ON THE long green meadows of this tranquil New England town, we have come to do honor—not alone to one brave soldier—but to the generations of earnest young men who left their homes to defend them at Concord, Antietam, San Juan, the Argonne—and in the snows of the Ardennes.

For as long as free men have lived, worked, worshiped and reared their families under these elms, so long have their sons been summoned to arms against those who would covet or destroy them. In generation after generation they have been forced to quit these quiet homes in your peaceful valley to fight—and sometimes to die—in conflicts visited upon them by issues that seemed remote from their everyday lives.

From the chancelleries of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Tokyo and Moscow, those bitter struggles that have scarred the progress of all mankind eventually spanned the seas to invade the snug parlors and warm kitchens of these colonial homes. And as these world struggles have wasted the youth and resources of nations, they have also left behind them sorrowing women and empty chairs in the houses on this green.

It is easy for us who are living to honor the sacrifices of those who are dead. For it helps us to assuage the guilt we should feel in their presence. Wars can be prevented just as surely as they are provoked and therefore we who fail to prevent them must share in guilt for the dead.

I have not come here today to consecrate war and its evils for the sacrifices war has produced. For every man in whom war has inspired sacrifice, courage and love, there are many more whom it has degraded with brutality, callousness and greed.

RATHER we are gathered here to take comfort and strength from those of our dead who have already given this Nation so much. We have come to learn—if we can—how men might live as charitably together in peace as they died for each other in war.

We have come to ask why it is that our young men must spend their bodies against the Siegfried Line—why it is men cannot live as bravely as they die.

In our hatred and renunciation of war, we must not forget that the roots of conflict flourish in the faults and failures of those who seek peace just as surely as they take shape from the diseases and designs of aggressors.

While the American people have within themselves the moral strength, the power, and wisdom to marshal their forces against aggression in whatever form it affects—we cannot feign innocence through indifference or neglect of struggles that bring on wars. We have suffered enough in two world wars to know that non-involvement in peace means certain involvement in war.

Either we shall employ our strength, power, and conscience boldly and righteously in defense of human dignity and freedom or we shall waste those reserves for peace and default to the forces that breed new wars.

This lad we buried today is partly the victim of your folly. He is the victim of your folly and the folly of all the peace-loving peoples who turned their backs on the ills of the world. For at the very time those aggressors at whose hands he met his death conspired against the peace of the world, we blinded ourselves to their threats and by our shameful inaction countenanced their starting attack.

Secure in distant and peaceful towns like these, clinging to comforts, refusing risks, seeking safety in refuge and refuge in words, we recanted power and conscience to side with those who sought peace at any price. Too late we discovered the price was too high; and to keep our freedom we paid in the bodies of our young sons.

IF THE United States ever again stoops to expedients to avoid the difficult decisions that come with leadership, the heavy burdens that come with defense, we shall once more run the dangers of all half-way measures and waste our strength and conscience as a weathervane rather than a force.

If we cringe from the necessity of meeting issues boldly with principle, resolution and strength, then we shall simply hurdle along from crisis to crisis, improvising with expedients, seeking inoffensive solutions, drugging the Nation with an illusion of security which under those conditions cannot exist. If we are to scamper from crisis to crisis, fixing principles and policies to the change of each day, we shall place ourselves supinely and helplessly at the mercy of any aggressor who might play on our public opinion and decimate our forces at will.

To live bravely by convictions from which the free peoples of this world can take heart, the American people must put their faith in stable, long-range policies—political, economic and military—programs that will not be heated and cooled with the brightening and waning of tension.

The United States has matured to world leadership; it is time we steered by the stars, not by the lights of each passing ship.

On this Memorial Day, as we take leave of this brave soldier—Corpl. Edward Wilkin, Army of the United States, Medal of Honor—we pay homage as he would have us do, to all his fallen comrades—to the strong, the weak; the leaders, the led; the brave, the fearful; to all who perished where only God could witness their charity to their fellow men.

Proudly—but reverently, sadly—we honor them. We pray they will ever rest in peace.

President Pays Tribute To War Dead

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday led the Nation in humble tribute to its sons and daughters who died in war.

He placed a wreath of white gladioli at the base of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier "in the name of the people of the United States and of citizens of the United States everywhere."

And then, standing bareheaded in the marble amphitheater at Arlington Cemetery, beneath cloudy, rain-threatening skies, he paid honor to the memory of "those who have given their lives that liberty may survive in the world."

All Races and All Creeds

"This country, as you know, is made up of all races and all creeds—people from Poland, people from Yugoslavia, people from Germany, people from France, people from Great Britain, people from Africa make up our population—and we live peaceably side by side," Mr. Truman said.

"That is our ambition for the whole world."

Speaking extemporaneously, he continued: "We want peace in the world. We want peace founded on justice. That is the fundamental platform of our foreign policy. That means that the United States has always stood and always will stand for peace in the world."

Listening to his words in the flag-draped amphitheater were more than 6000 persons. Americans throughout the country heard him over a Nation-wide radio hookup, and then went on to hold memorial ceremonies of their own.

On barren Iwo Jima, in crowded London, at cemeteries over the world where American servicemen are buried, services were held by those who had not forgotten.

"Let us continue to remember that those men and women have not died in vain," the Chief Executive said. As he spoke, a young soldier paced off the hours of eternal vigil in cadenced steps before the Tomb, rifle on shoulder.

President Truman said he hoped world-wide Memorial Day rites would emphasize that the United States worked only for peace in the world.

To gain that peace, he declared, "we must have the ability to enforce it."

"May God give us that strength and ability," he concluded.

Twenty-one Gun Salute

Mr. Truman's arrival and departure was heralded by a 21-gun salute. After his speech, he motored across the Potomac to the Watergate below the Lincoln Memorial. There, at the services of the First Reserve Association, he placed a rose in the floral anchor in memory of the late President Roosevelt.

Ceremonies at Arlington continued with inauguration of the

Hopes Fading For Senate Action On Oleo Bill

By the United Press

Supporters of a bill to end Federal taxes on oleomargarine were gloomy yesterday about chances of getting it passed at this session of Congress.

Most blamed Senator Taft (R., Ohio) for what they called his "lack of enthusiasm" for the bill. Taft has said he favors it.

The repealer has been passed by the House and reported favorably by the Senate Finance Committee. But Taft's Senate GOP Policy Committee thus far has failed to give it priority for floor debate.

With adjournment less than three weeks away, anything not tagged "must" has only an outside chance of passage.

Reds Jolted By Czechs' Blank Vote

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Monday, May 31 (U.P.).—Almost 11 per cent of the voters in Sunday's carefully-arranged parliamentary elections cast blank protest ballots, shattering the Communist-dominated government's hopes of overwhelming victory, official returns showed today.

Country-wide official returns at 11:30 p. m. gave incomplete totals as follows: Progovernment, 5,319,794; blank, 674,252.

The percentage of protest votes was running so high in Prague last night that the Interior Ministry dismissed city-employed tabulators and took direct charge of the ballot count, authoritative unofficial sources said early today.

50 Per Cent in Some Districts

Members of the city counting committee said that the protest vote in Prague was averaging 25 per cent and had gone as high as 50 per cent in some districts.

Voters had two alternatives—to vote for the Communist-selected official slate, or to cast blank ballots. In most places balloting was public and voters were encouraged to discard their prominently marked blanks under the eye of Communist election officials.

Many Czechs reported they had discarded their blank ballots after placing photographs of President Eduard Benes in the ballot boxes and pocketing the official slate ballot.

Unofficial sources said that Benes himself did not vote, following the precedent he set in 1946 of placing himself above politics.

An official announcement issued at 10 p. m., showing a 95 per cent progovernment vote in 17 of Prague's 20 districts, was withdrawn before 11 p. m. Officials said that "mistakes had been made in many districts," and that no official tabulation of the city vote could be issued until later today.

Official countrywide returns at midnight gave the government ticket about 88.8 per cent of the total vote. Official totals were progovernment, 5,319,794; blank, 674,252.

One of the 20 city tabulators who had begun the Prague vote count said early today:

"We had compiled enough returns to show a definite trend just after 8 o'clock last night. Each of us had one of the 20 Prague districts.

"As nearly as we can tell, the vote was ranging from 20 to 30 per cent against the government, with some districts going as high as 50 per cent.

Told to Go Home

"The people from the Ministry of the Interior were there supervising work, in accordance with their duties. Suddenly, we were told to go home and the ministry people said they would finish the count."

Another official said he had noted about 12 per cent of blank ballots in the district whose votes he was tabulating, and an equal number of invalid ballots—presumably progovernment ballots which had been defaced in some way.

The official returns made no mention of invalid ballots.

Three hundred seats in Parliament are to be filled, but no matter what the returns, the single list will be elected. There are no opposition candidates. Only the blank ballots are available for those who wish to express disapproval.

Communists have drummed up public opinion in favor of public voting. Government posters have attacked blank ballots as "the road to another Munich."

Correspondents who toured Prague under Ministry of Information escort reported that nine

One Family in Four Expected To Overspend 1948 Income

By The Associated Press

At least one out of every four American families probably will overspend its income this year.

So says analysts of the Federal Reserve Board. They based the conclusion yesterday on a board survey of consumer finances which figured that Americans plan to keep spending freely for new homes and goods—using their credit or savings if necessary.

The survey, a sampling undertaken annually by the board for the last three years, showed the "general financial status of consumers" is still strong, but that it developed in 1947 "the first signs of weakening." Among those signs were these significant items:

Those over-spending income last year included large numbers in the $3000-to-$5000-a year income class, whereas overspending in 1946 was concentrated in the under-$3000 class.

There was a "particularly significant rise" in the number of overspenders with annual incomes running up to $7500.

Also, about three million more families or individuals completely cashed out their holdings of savings bonds.

Out of the 17 million persons buying furniture, refrigerators, radios, washing machines, ranges and other appliances, nine million did so on the instalment plan—nearly twice the number who did so in 1946.

On the other hand, consumer incomes as a whole rose more than 10 per cent last year.

"Almost 50 per cent of all spending units (family groups or individuals) reported higher money incomes in 1947 than in 1946 but a considerable number felt that because of the higher cost of living they were worse off financially at the end of the year than at the beginning," the report said.

Gulf to N. Y. Gas Pipeline Is Approved

By The Associated Press

Construction of a pipeline to carry natural gas from the Southwest to New York City and the Middle Atlantic area had the approval of the Federal Power Commission yesterday.

The line is to be built by the Trans-Continental Gas Pipeline Co. of Longview, Tex. Its cost is estimated at 151 million dollars to 180 million dollars. The company expects to be ready to start operations in the fall of 1950.

The commission said the project "will bring extensive benefits to as many as four million utility customers in the Middle Atlantic area." It also said that the natural gas brought through the line will take the place of at least 629 million gallons of fuel oil "which is currently in short supply."

Conditional authority for building the line was given by the commission late Saturday night.

One condition to the granting of a certificate was that the company make a further study of the possibilities for underground storage of gas in off-peak seasons and report on this within two years.

The commission said the com-

Voting Indicates Gains by Reds in 3 Bavarian Cities

Munich, Germany, May 30 (AP).—Incomplete returns indicated tonight the German Communist Party had made substantial gains in three Bavarian cities in the American occupation zone.

The gains were reported in Munich, Nuernberg and Hof after nearly 1,200,000 Bavarians voted to elect municipal councils in 41 cities.

Incomplete returns showed the Communists in second place in Nuernberg. In Munich returns gave them 12 per cent of the vote. Considerable Communist strength was reported in Hof, bordering the Russian zone.

Rightist gains were reported in Munich where politicians who called for "Bavaria for Bavarians" were getting strong support. Early returns gave the separatist Bavarian party 20 per cent of the vote.

American officials said they were "startled" by the success of the Communists.

Byrnes Feels Soviet Wants Agreement

Rock Hill, S. C., May 30 (AP).—James F. Byrnes expressed belief today that the Russians "for some reason satisfactory to them" want to reach agreement with the United States.

The former Secretary of State said this Government should be willing to talk with the Russians, so long as "questions affecting other Allied government" are not involved.

But Byrnes said we should go ahead with our defense program in the meantime and that we should remember "the old Indian chief who said 'fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me.'"

Byrnes' address was prepared for delivery at Winthrop College commencement exercises.

Follows Marshall Speech

He spoke less than 48 hours after his successor, Secretary of State Marshall, warned the Nation against falling into a "peace" trap baited with Soviet propaganda. Byrnes apparently put more stock in the recent Soviet overtures than Marshall did.

"The conduct of the Soviet representatives in the United Nations would indicate a lack of sincerity in these statements," Byrnes said. "However, this is not conclusive. It is my opinion that for some reason satisfactory to them they now wish to reach an agreement with us.

"It has always been my belief that the Soviets, in their policy of expansion, will go just as far as the democracies permit them to go. When they conclude they can go no farther without fighting, I believe they will abandon their war of nerves and seek a settlement.

Should Be Convinced

"By this time they should conclude that we have no nerves they can shatter, but we have power and we intend to use that power to preserve our freedom and, through the United Nations, to preserve the freedom of other free peoples who have the courage to resist aggression."

Byrnes said Premier Stalin was guilty of "bad taste" in addressing a letter to Henry A. Wallace recently when he "knew full well that as head of a government he should address only the President of the United States."

Pope Urges Hungarians To Resist the Ungodly

Rome, Italy, May 30 (AP).—Pope Pius XII today called upon the people of Hungary to "resist those who would deny the Name and Majesty of God and attempt to delude you through cunning, falsehood and deception."

The Pope made a special radio address to Hungary on the tenth anniversary of the International Eucharistic Congress held in Budapest in 1938. The Pope recalled that he attended the Eucharistic Congress then as a papal legate when he was Secretary of State to Pope Pius XI.

Run-off Due on N. C. Governor

Nomination for U. S. Senate Is Conceded to Broughton

Raleigh, N. C., May 30 (U.P.).—Senator William B. Umstead today conceded victory to former Governor J. Melville Broughton in the election to select a Democratic nominee for the United States Senate.

Umstead conceded early today that he was beaten in his bid to hold the Senate seat he got by appointment in December, 1946.

Broughton, who was North Carolina's Governor from 1940 to 1944, will enter the Senate as soon as returns of the general election are canvassed officially in November. He will serve a short term from then until regular inauguration day in January and then a regular six-year term. In North Carolina the Democratic nomination is tantamount to election.

Returns from 1776 of North Carolina's 1952 precincts gave: short term: Broughton 164,843; Umstead 164,514. Long term, Broughton 184,250; Umstead 162,790.

A runoff appeared certain in the Governor's race, in which State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson led a six-man field. Johnson held an edge over former Agriculture Commissioner Kerr Scott. R. Mayne Albright was a poor third, and Oscar Barker fourth.

Trailing far behind were William F. Stanley, sr., and Olla Ray

Oregon City Engulfed as Columbia Dike Breaks

BULLETIN

Portland, Oreg., May 30 (U.P.).—Dr. F. Sydney Hansen, Multnomah County health officer, said tonight he feared the death toll in the Vanport City, Oreg., flood disaster "may reach into the hundreds."

Portland, Oreg. May 30 (AP). The war built town of Vanport was shattered by a wall of water that burst from the flooding Columbia River today and an undetermined number of the town's 18,700 residents were drowned.

Whole apartment units were broken and piled like kindling against the one wall of the inclosed low-lying community.

The Army Corps of Engineers said the ground level of the town was 15 feet below the river level at 4 p. m. (PST) but the depth of the water in the town was not known immediately. It appeared to have risen to the level of the river, according to witnesses.

Men, women and children were caught in the swirling water that burst through a railroad embankment and many were swept away. Survivors said they were caught in the water before they knew the water was in the town.

Hundreds on Rooftops

Hundreds of people were clinging to the rooftops and being taken off by boats three hours after the disaster struck the town.

Walls of water, each higher than the next, poured through the town like ocean breakers. The waves tore the flimsy wooden houses from their foundations, sent them whirling along with the current.

Thousands of persons were rescued. Men formed human chains and passed women and children along them to safety.

Nearly every bus, truck, and taxi available rushed to the scene when the break came. Many of them were caught in the water.

A warning siren, when the leak was first discovered, gave the first

Downpour of Rain Floods Low D. C. Areas

A pouring rain swamped Greater Washington last night, stalling hundreds of motor vehicles, nearly submerging some; flooding basements, and generally spoiling late holiday activities.

A total of 1½ inches of rain was recorded at the National Airport weather station as the storm eased off near 11 p. m. It started about 4:45 p. m.

Worst hit by rising water, police said, was the area around the 3900 block of Minnesota ave. se. In a low parking lot behind the Senator Theater, 3950 Minnesota ave. se., only the roofs of nearly a score of parked automobiles were visible above water. Dozens of others there were found to be immobilized as movie patrons waded out in bare legs.

Firemen Kept on Jump

The Fire Department received calls for flooded basements and traffic jams at the rate of about two or three every minute between 8 and 9:30 p. m.

In Silver Spring, a house at 108 St. Lawrence st. was struck by lightning, and Silver Spring Engine Company No. 2 extinguished a small fire started thereby on the roof.

The road to the Anacostia Naval Air Station was all but impassable.

Harbor police reported the Anacostia River over its banks in places—an expected occurrence

Europeans Honor American War Dead

London, May 30 (AP). — Many thousands of Europeans gathered on a Memorial Day of alternating sunshine and rain today to honor American war dead at dozens of cemeteries.

Americans who died in the Battle of the Bulge, in dreary Ardennes woods, and at Bastogne were honored at the American military cemetery of Notre Dame near Dinant, Belgium. There Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States commander in Europe, said these Americans rest in a free country, and he made a pledge to the dead: "We shall not fail these heroes in our efforts to establish and maintain freedom."

Raoul de Fraiteur, Belgium's Minister of National Defense, said the cemetery has become and will for all time be a place of pilgrimage for Belgians. Every grave in the cemetery was marked by a small American flag.

Alan G. Kirk, United States Ambassador to Belgium, said families in America are comforted by the thoughtfulness of the citizens of the little villages which surround the Belgian cemetery.

On a spot which was an American outpost in the Battle of the Bulge Kirk buried a copper cylinder bearing names of officials who took part in the ceremony today.

Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, deputy commander of American forces in Europe, spoke at a memorial service at Margraten, Holland. Many Americans buried there served with Huebner in the war.

At Solers Cemetery near Paris United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery said America's responsibility to fulfill its obligations to its soldier dead has never been greater "because of renewed threats to freedom."

Caffery spoke later at Surenes Cemetery, where dead of the First World War lie. At the Place Des Etats-Unis he laid a wreath on the monument to men who served with French forces. At the Arc de Triomphe Caffery laid another wreath on the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of American Air Forces in Europe, voiced at Solers Cemetery the hope that "universal freedom may ultimately be achieved through mutual understanding among nations."

In a memorial service at Berlin Maj. Gen. George P. Hayes, American deputy military governor, said it is a sincere American desire to see a prosperous and happy Germany rise from the devastation of war.

At Castel Fiorentino in Italy a Memorial Day tribute was paid to 4772 United States war dead by the man who commanded them in their last battle—Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keys, now military commander in Austria.

Returns from 1778 precincts gave Johnson 161,620; Scott, 151,528; Albright, 68,184; Barker, 10,426; Stanley, 2060, and Boyd, 1874.

All Renominated

All North Carolina Congressmen who sought to return to Washington were renominated. Representative Carl T. Durham had a sizable edge on Thomas Turner; Representative C. B. Deane ran away from Giles Y. Newton, and Representative Hamilton C. Jones led Marvin L. Ritch, while Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle nosed out Williard Ridings.

For the seat vacated by Representative John H. Folger, blanket manufacturer Thurmond Chatham won the nomination from country editor Ford Duncan.

A runoff was in view in the Seventh District for the nomination to succeed Representative J. Bayard Clark. Solicitor F. Ertle Carlyle led a three-man field but faced a second primary against Hargrove Bellamy.

In the Tenth Congressional district, a Republican second primary loomed between Roy A. Harmon and Louis Rogers. One will oppose Jones in the general election.

Opposes Civil Rights Program

Broughton, North Carolina's wartime Governor who aspired to the vice presidency when his term ended in 1944, won after months of careful campaigning. He is a 60-year-old Raleigh attorney who bid strongly for the State's big tobacco-farmer vote and opposed President Truman's civil rights program.

Umstead, named by Gov. Gregg Cherry to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Josiah W. Bailey, also opposed the civil rights proposals. The State's newly formed United Labor Political Committee fought Umstead for his support of the Taft-Hartley law.

However, the test of labor's voting strength was inconclusive, for the union group also indorsed Albright, who was badly beaten.

Hearings Set In 'Voice' Probe

Two Senate committees will start joint public hearings Tuesday into the "Know North America" broadcasts which angered lawmakers who said their States had been slurred.

Smith's group is acting jointly in the inquiry with the Senate investigating committee, of which Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) is chairman.

Armed Services Gold Star program. Next of kin of seven District war dead, chosen by the District Commissioners as representative of deceased of all branches of the service, were awarded gold star lapel buttons.

Making the presentations were Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Army; John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Navy, and Arthur S. Barrows, Undersecretary of the Air Force.

Taps, rolling softly across the Virginia hills, and retirement of the colors brought tears to the eyes of many at close of the services.

The program was sponsored by the GAR Memorial Day Corporation, which includes the Grand Army of the Republic, United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion.

As formal rites ended, numerous patriotic and veterans organizations began placing additional wreaths at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Similarly honored were the thousands of other graves in the Nation's shrine, each with an American Flag and a red rose, many with extensive floral decorations.

Rain, which held back during the morning amphitheater services, began falling in the afternoon, and continued intermittently. Ceremonies there and over Greater Washington went on, however.

While Washingtonians and citizens throughout the United States were enjoying the long Memorial Day weekend, wire services reported that at least 160 persons had been killed accidentally since Friday night. It was predicted that there would be 225 deaths for the holiday.

Throughout Greater Washington, the following Memorial Day observances were held:

Georgetown University Law School, 506 E st. nw., honored its 46 deceased of both wars in services at 10 a. m. Following wreath-laying rites, Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Commandant of Marine Corps schools at Quantico, delivered the main address.

Services honoring war dead of the Second Infantry Division were held at 2:30 p. m. at the division monument on Constitution ave., between 16th and 17th sts. nw.

Annual memorial services of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 were held at the Hamilton Hotel at 2 p. m.

Cissel Saxon Post No. 41, American Legion, sponsored services at the Silver Spring Armory. Principal speaker was Col. Paul H. Griffith, past national commander of the American Legion.

A parade and commemorative ceremonies were held in Upper Marlboro. Participants included members of the Volunteer Fire Department, Lions Club and American Legion Post.

In Laurel, residents witnessed a parade and laying of wreaths in Ivy Hill Cemetery. Additional services were held at Laurel American Legion Post Home, where Kent Mullikin, post member, spoke.

Seat Pleasant citizens viewed a parade at 10:30 a. m., followed by 11 a. m. ceremonies at the War Memorial there. William H. McGrath, member of the Maryland House of Delegates, was the principal speaker.

Simple rites were held at 1:30 p. m. at Bladensburg Peace Cross by Snyder-Farmer-Butler Post No. 3, American Legion of Hyattsville.

Residents of Forest Heights held a parade and memorial ceremonies at 2 p. m. A plaque was dedicated by all citizens of the community for war dead.

Memorial Day exercises were held at Battle Ground National Cemetery under auspices of the GAR Memorial Day Corporation and Brightwood Citizens Association.

In Alexandria, a memorial to George Washington High School students who died in World War II was dedicated at 2:30 p. m. rites at the school. T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools, spoke.

A parade, sponsored by Arlington County VFW posts, was held at 1:30 p. m. in Clarendon. At 2 p. m., services were held on the courthouse lawn. Speakers included Rear Adm. Daniel V. Gallery, USN, and Daniel A. Dugan, chairmant of the County Board.

Fairlington residents held a parade, flag raising and athletic events. Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg spoke at Fairlington Elementary School.

Martin - Leppert - Sipes Post, VFW, and Falls Church Post, American Legion, sponsored a parade and memorial services in Falls Church.

Thirty Gold Star Mothers of the Marine Corps placed six floral Gold Star wreaths on the statue of the Iwo Jima flag-raising at the Quantico Marine Corps base at 11:30 a. m.

Groups at Arlington

In Arlington National Cemetery, the following groups held Memorial Day observances:

At 10:15 a. m., representatives of the French Embassy, United States State Department and the Army joined with officials of the American Veterans Committee to honor the memory of Staff Sergt. Lawrence R. Kelly of Altoona, Pa., first American to enter St. Cloud, France, during the liberation.

Members of the GAR Women's Relief Corps held services at 10 a. m. at Arlington Mansion.

United Spanish War Veterans held rites at the "Maine Mast" at 11:30 a. m.

After placing a wreath on the D. C. War Memorial in Potomac Park, Legionnaires placed another at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. National Guard of Honor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars participated.

Yankee Division Club members and representatives of Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards Post, VFW, placed flags and flowers on all known graves of Yankee Division dead.

First Awards of Gold Stars Made to Kin of War II Dead

In the name of all American dead of World War II, parents and widows of seven District war dead yesterday received the first Gold Star lapel buttons in presentation ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery.

Thus did the Armed Services Gold Star program, which will award the lapel buttons to next of kin and certain other members of the families of all deceased of the last war, get under way.

The parents and widows, whose men represented all branches of the service, were awarded the buttons by Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan, and Air Force Undersecretary Arthur S. Barrows.

Receiving the first Gold Stars were:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Overhall, parents, and Mrs. Virginia Overhall, widow of Capt. Charles H. Overhall, rifle company commander who was killed in Italy. An honor graduate of Dunbar High School, he held a B.S. degree from Howard University. His widow lives at 1123 Fairmont st. nw.

Protestant Bluecoats Honor Dead

Members of the Police and Firemen's Protestant Society yesterday joined in a religious service honoring 41 of their members who died during the past year.

Before the service, the men marched from the Capitol to Waugh Methodist Church, 306 A st. ne., where the Rev. Hirl A. Kester, pastor and chaplain of the society, spoke to them.

Mr. Kester called them to take a stand in the battle between God and "a vicious type of paganism which is trying to destroy everything true, good, precious, and sacred in this world."

No one can be on both sides in this battle, he declared, adding that there could be no compromise with paganism. Referring to the recent Supreme Court decision on religious instruction in the public schools, Mr. Kester asserted, "A nation that can rule out Christianity and allow teachers to teach communism needs a Christian movement."

At a luncheon at the Continental Hotel after the service, Lieut. Reid L. Hammann, president of the society, introduced Fire Chief Clement Murphy, Assistant Police Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott, Walter Fowler, District budget officer; Charles Stofberg, special assistant to the District Commissioners; Maj. Ernest Brown, retired superintendent of the Police Department, and Deputy Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew.

Dr. William F. Wright, Methodist superintendent of a Hagerstown (Md.) district, urged the police and firemen not to compromise their faith and moral standards.

Representative Sam Hobbs (D., Ala.) paid tribute to men of the two forces as "one of the main lines of national defense," and urged them to support the Protestant and Catholic police and firemen's societies.

CAA Finances Radio Device

By the United Press

The Civil Aeronautics Administration disclosed yesterday that it has financed development of a relatively low-cost radio device which will enable private fliers to navigate with most of the assurance of airliner pilots.

The gadget is a static-free high frequency radio receiver that can tune in signals or voice communications from the ground. Without much effort, the pilot can tell precisely where he is and get continuing weather reports.

CAA said the device was developed by National Aeronautical Corp., Ambler, Pa., and will be on the market by January. The receiver weighs about 15 pounds and will cost under $500 or about one-fourth the present price of similar devices.

The new aid can be used in conjunction with the CAA's omnidirectional radio ranges which eventually will replace all present four-course ranges.

Modern ranges limit air traffic to a one-plane-in-one-direction, one-in-the-other type of operation. With omniranges, any number of courses can be selected. Thus they should make possible considerable expansion and speeding up of air traffic.

Private fliers have protested the shift to omniranges, partly because of the high cost of airborne radio receivers. The CAA attempted to answer this problem by paying development costs on the new aid.

Jews Resent Terms Of U. N. Truce Plea

In New Note

U. S. Calls Lebanon Lawbreaker

By The Associated Press

The United States has accused Lebanon as an international lawbreaker in a sharp protest against detention of 41 Jewish Americans seized by force from an American merchantman.

The State Department made public yesterday its rejection of Lebanon's explanation as "unsatisfactory."

Demanding "immediate release" of the Americans, the note delivered in Beirut Saturday by United States Minister Lowell Pinkerton declared that the United States views Lebanon's action as "in disregard of the established principles of international law relating to the rights and duties of a state with respect to aliens."

While assailing the Arab state's stand as illegal, the State Department went ahead with arrangements for releasing the captives on terms made by Lebanon. These plans are not complete, an official said.

This requires that they come back to the United States and not go to Palestine. Lebanon based its seizure of them on the contention they were going to fight against the Arabs. They are in a concentration camp.

Michael J. McDermiott, State Department press officer, told a reporter:

"The department does not consider assistance in repatriating Americans as prejudicing in any way its contention that their detention by the Lebanese government is illegal."

Lake Success, May 30 (NYHT). The Jews were bitter today over the terms of the latest United Nations appeal for a Palestine truce and a high-ranking Arab official said that Arab acceptance of the appeal "is not by any means certain."

The Arab's statement aroused speculation among U. N. observers of a split among the Arab countries on the new truce call.

Fair El Khouri, of Syria, last night said he thought Arab acceptance "likely."

The call for a four-week truce, with a world ban on arms shipments to Israel and the seven Arab states, was approved last night by the Security Council. It gives both sides until Tuesday at 7 p. m. (EDT) to accept or face possible council action that could lead theoretically to diplomatic, economic and military sanctions.

Terms of the appeal, stemming from an American-amended British resolution, were generally regarded as favoring the Arabs at the expense of the Jews.

The Arab official who asked anonymity today insisted that the latest U. N. plan does not deal with the political issue of the Jewish state, and it was recalled that the Arabs rejected the council's truce appeal of May 22 on the ground that they could not permit existence of such a state.

U. S. Given Credit For Saving Peace Plan

Lake Success, May 30 (AP).—The United States was credited here today with saving Britain's Palestine armistice plan from a Soviet veto.

Authoritative circles credited American Delegate Warren R. Austin with playing a strong role in rewriting the British resolution to make it acceptable to the United States and at least tolerable to Russia.

Yesterday, before the Council voted on Russian demands for force to end the war, the British asked Austin to talk over amendments which would make the plan agreeable to him.

Austin refused even to discuss it. He was reported as feeling that he backed the Russian call for force completely and he could consider no other course while that was before the Council.

Once the Council voted on the Russian proposal, which came two votes short of adoption, Austin swung into action.

He tossed in a flock of amendments to the British plan.

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet deputy Foreign Minister, had attacked the British proposal in such strong terms that the delegates knew a veto was coming up unless changes were made.

The British originally wanted an embargo on arms shipments and immigration of military men into Palestine.

Austin changed that—with quick British approval—to include a similar ban on arms and men into the seven Arab countries—Egypt, Lebanon, Syria, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Yemen and Trans-Jordan.

Indonesians Charge Dutch Violate Pact

Lake Success, N. Y., May 30 (U.P.). Spokesmen for the Republic of Indonesia charged tonight that The Netherlands, in violation of an agreement negotiated through the United Nations, was trying to freeze the republic out of important steps in the formation of a United Sates of Indonesia.

The republic said the Dutch "have now buried the last shreds" of the political agreement by which the U. N. Security Council helped end last year's war between the Dutch and Indonesian Republics.

The Republican statement said the Dutch had repeatedly violated the so-called Renville agreement, under whcih the Indonesian Republic was to be allowed a major part in formation of a United States of Indonesia.

four-week cease fire throughout the Holy Land.

Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary-general of the Arab League, said tonight in Cairo that "the Zionists who started this war in Palestine must be left alone to take the punishment they deserve." He did not say, however, whether the political committee will accept or reject the proposal when it meets tomorrow.

There has been no immediate reaction from the Jews, although a Jewish spokesman at Lake Success denounced the proposal as a British scheme to give the Arabs the advantage of "stockpiled" arms. Azzam Pasha claimed the truce would be to Jewish advantage.

Associated Press Correspondent Joseph C. Goodwin, with the Arab Legion in central Palestine, told in a dispatch of the apparent forming of allied forces for the battle of Tel Aviv.

The Legion armor and artillery moved up to the crescent-shaped front, which has its eastern end tied to Jerusalem's old city, and has forward patrols probing west to Hartiv, less than 20 miles east of Tel Aviv, Goodwin said Arabs told him.

Less than 20 miles southwest of the Legion's forward positions, Egyptian forces hammered at the Jewish seacoast settlement of Isdud, 23 miles south of Tel Aviv. The Egyptian defense ministry said tonight its troops repulsed a Jewish counterattack on Isdud where, the Israeli government said, the enemies staged artillery duels most of the day.

Arab sources indicated tonight that the bloody, two-day battle of Latrun had ended in an Arab victory. This was not confirmed elsewhere. These sources said the Jewish fighters had withdrawn from the Latrun battlefront to the Haganah staging area in Hulda. Both sides have maintained strict secrecy regarding the progress of this battle.

Israeli army sources said in Haifa that Jewish troops had captured the Arab towns of Lajjun and Megiddo, overlooking the plain of Armageddon, after a fierce battle. These towns are about 8 miles southwest of Afula, the first large Jewish town north of the Arab-controlled Nablus-Jenin-Tulkarm triangle.

Haganah, the Jewish army, the source said, drove Iraqi troops from the two towns and also captured a fortified police station outside Lajjun.

Concerning the purported gas plot, the Israeli spokesman told reporters that the Jews had intercepted an Arab Legion order to attack Jerusalem's new city with bombs, shells and gas.

"This is an eleventh-hour attempt to force a decision in the battle of Jerusalem before the deadline set by the Security Council," he said. The Council has asked the belligerents to agree, by Tuesday night, to a four-week truce.

Legion artillery was used earlier against the 80,000 to 90,000 Jews besieged in modern sections of Jerusalem.

The Israeli army reported its capture of pumping installations will relieve an acute water situation in Jerusalem.

Accounts from both sides said Egyptian and Israeli commanders employed infantry, artillery and planes in a developing battle on the Palestine coast 20 miles south of the Jaffa-Tel Aviv area. An Egyptian column reached Isdud yesterday after a 10-mile march up the coast, an Israeli army communique said.

Apparently the Egyptians are approaching the forward limits, at least, of the Jewish line protecting the southern end of Israel's coastal strip.

French Warship Ordered to Palestine

Paris, May 30 (NYHT).—The French government issued instructions last night for a cruiser, equipped with two planes, to be sent to Palestine to protect French lives and property in the Holy Land.

Arab bullets were reported piercing sandbags protecting the French consulate-general in Jerusalem.

Pole Tells Of Promise By Roosevelt

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP).—The president of the Polish American Congress said tonight that Franklin D. Roosevelt promised him that he would "take care of Stalin after the war."

Charles Rozmarek of Chicago in a report to the congress said he spoke with the late President twice before the Yalta conference and that Roosevelt said "he had mortal fear of Stalin teaming up with Hitler."

Rozmarek quoted Roosevelt as having said he would work for the independence of Poland after the war, but that it was necessary to win the war first.

But at Yalta, said Rozmarek, "Roosevelt sold Poland down the Volga."

Rozmarek said Roosevelt told him he had been "fooled" by Stalin many times before."

out of 10 voters voted publicly.

"Nobody used the screen and nobody cast the white (blank) ticket there," one voter said at Prague's Lobkovic Square poll. "It was impossible. Even I didn't and I was sure I would."

At mid-afternoon there were scores of reports of voters inserting pictures of President Benes, the late Jan Masaryk and even derisive verses in the official ballot envelope to show their scorn of Communist tactics.

Such incidents could occur, however, only in districts where voters were able to go behind the private voting screens.

The voting procedure is simple. Earlier in the week voters received two ballots: one with the government list and one blank ballot with a large black cross. At the poll the voter was handed an envelope. His duty was to insert one ballot in the envelope and discard the other.

To vote privately the voter could go behind a screen, if he dared to flaunt public opinion. At Litovice, 9 miles west of Prague, the screen was almost flat against the wall and squarely behind the chairs of election officials.

In most district wastebaskets for discards stood in the open. Observers said they could tell at a distance how voters balloted. In one Prague precinct an officiall stood at the waste basket and identified the discards.

Greek Troops Repulse Red-Led Guerillas

Athens, May 30 (AP).—Greek troops are striking successfully at Communist-led guerillas in the Mount Othrys area of central Greece, the general staff announced today.

The communique said guerilla storehouses and 102 cavalry horses were captured during the engagement northeast of Lamia. Greek troops also rounded up 107 guerillas, relatives of guerillas and members of the Communist underground.

Elephant Shrews From Africa Arrive Here for Use in Malaria Studies

One hundred and four elephant shrews arrived here by plane from Africa yesterday to help science fight malaria.

The 3-inch, furry animals, with quivering snouts and long, mouse-like tails, will be used in important experiments on malaria—to be launched here today.

What's more, according to Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, where the shrews are stopping, the visitors are the first of their type in the country.

Heading up the studies will be Dr. Clay G. Huff, chief parasitologist of the Naval Medical Research Institute in Bethesda and for 17 years professor of parasitology at the University of Chicago. He said he has wanted to conduct such experiments for 20 years.

The animals, caught by natives at 20 cents apiece, were flown from Juba in deepest Africa to Tripoli and then to the National Airport here. The sensitive, nervous creatures, which have been known to die of fright after a loud hand slap, were entrusted to William Terry, expedition field executive, and Chief Pharmacist's Mate Deaner Lawless, Navy parasitologist.

The two, connected with the University of California-Navy Department project, led by Wendell Phillips, fed the tiny animals and cared for them. They made special arrangements to stop en route to pick up live grasshoppers—much loved by the shrews.

Dr. Hurr, who is credited with discovering an entirely new and unknown cycle of the malarial parasite—outside the blood stream—hopes to transfer parasites from the shrew to other animals more easily adjusted to laboratory use.

The shrews had to be very carefully handled after their capture. Of the first batch of 87 gathered by members of the expedition, 80 died. After that, greater care was exercised. The nervous little creatures first were fed condensed milk from an eyedropper, later were given porridge, rice, custard and hard-boiled eggs, and now that they're in Washington, hamburgers.

According to Terry, the type of malaria carried by the shrew may be the closest yet to that which fells so many humans. Dr. Huff hopes this is true, but doesn't know yet.

Chinese Girl Fasts 19 Days Without Visible Ill Effects

By Tom Masterson

Chungking, May 30 (AP).—Astonished doctors reported today a Chinese peasant girl—who says she hasn't eaten in nine years—has fasted for 19 days without visible ill effects.

In that time she has never been out of sight of a nurse and has taken only a half pint of water, said Dr. T. Y. Gan of Chungking Municipal Hospital. Other doctors vouched for Gan's story.

"Normally a girl undergoing such a fast would be in an extremely weakened condition, perhaps even in a coma," Gan said.

"This girl leads a perfectly normal life except for not eating and limited drinking."

I went in to see the girl, Yang Mei. She is small, homely, with buck teeth. She weighs about 85 pounds and is about 20 years old.

She shows no sign of starvation. She appears no different from any other peasant girl.

Her expression and eyes are generally dull. She sat listlessly, her hands clasped in her lap.

Gan said the girl told him that about nine years ago she suffered severe gastric pains that lasted for two months. She said she has eaten nothing since.

"She shows no desire for food," Gan said. "She has complained of thirst only three times. When I asked her why she didn't drink more she said she didn't feel comfortable.

"I could guess why she does not want to eat or drink. There could be phychological reasons. But I cannot understand how she can live."

The doctor said the girl had not been given a thorough physical examination to check her story of a nine-year fast. Gan said her relatives were afraid she might be hurt and refused to let her undergo the examination.

"The girl is afraid too," he added. "Eventually we hope to gain her confidence. Only then can we hope to find out the truth."

2 Armenians Win Stalin Prize for Atom Discoveries

Moscow, May 30 (U.P.).—Two Armenian brothers have been awarded a $40,000 Stalin prize for discovering a series of particles which may show science how the atom bomb is cemented together.

The brothers are Abram Isaakovich Alikhanov and Artemy Isaakovich Alikhanian, who have been exploring nuclear physics and cosmic rays since the early 1930s. Artemy changed his name when their prominence began to lead to confusion.

Using the world's largest non-electric magnet—made of specially prepared Russian metals and weighing "tens of tons"—they discovered in cosmic ray atoms new particles which they called "varitrones."

Session-End Jam Perils Red Control Bill

By The Associated Press

The Mundt-Nixon bill to control Communists may be sidetracked in a session-end jam of Senate lawmaking.

A Republican leader who favprs enactment of legislation along the lines of the House-approved measure told a reporter that if Congress quits June 19 there is little chance of final action on the bill.

If it is shelved now, sponsors will have to start all over again toward two-house approval in the new Congress unless a special session is held.

The Judiciary Committee resumes hearings on the measure today, with indications that when members get down to line-by-line work on the bill—possibility later in the week—they will propose extensive changes.

As it passed the House the measure makes it illegal to try in any way to set up a foreign dictatorship in this country. It brands the Communist party as an organization under foreign control and requires it to register its membership every year with the Attorney General.

The bill, or some of its features, already has been criticized by committee members Langer (R., N. Dak)., Cooper (R., Ky.), McCarran (D., Nev.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Eastland (D., Miss.).

Senator Moore (R., Okla.) told a reporter he doesn't see anything wrong with it. Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said he wants a bill of this type passed. Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.) has indicated he favors it.

Five other committee members remain publicly uncommitted. They include Chairman Wiley (R., Wis.) and Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Fulbright (D., Ark.) and McGrath (D., R. I.). Fulbright told a reporter he is "not too impresed with the bill" but wants to study it further.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), who has criticized the form of the measure, has said that if the committee reports it out, the Senate GOP policy committee, which he heads, will try to give it a place on the calendar.

Wallace Sees Senate Opposition Rising

Denver, May 30 (AP).—Opposition to the Mundt-Nixon anti-Communist bill is rising in the Senate, Henry A. Wallace said today.

"I have the feeling now that there is going to be much more opposition in the Senate than seemed probable when I went to Washington," the third party presidential candidate said at a press conference.

"The bill would do more to wreck American liberty than any law that has been passed," he added.

First Jet Engine Is Released for Commercial Use

By the United Press

The Air Force yesterday announced it has released the first jet engine to aircraft manufacturers for use in commercial transport planes.

The engine is the J-33-21, which powers most of the 1000 P-80 fighters now in use.

The engine is based on a British design. This country recently designed its own.

Convention

Townsend Here to Push For Wallace

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 81-year-old arch-apostle of old-age pensions, is in town to further his mission and also support the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

Townsend

Dr. Townsend said he plans to accomplish this double-barreled purpose during the meeting of the second annual national convention of the Townsend National Recovery Plan, Inc., as his followers are officially known. The sessions will be held at the Uline Arena for five days beginning Wednesday.

Strongly emphasizing his personal support of the Henry Wallace-Glen Taylor presidential ticket, the slight, white-haired crusader said he was confident the convention would indorse the two candidates.

Admitting that he is often called a Communist, Dr. Townsend revealed his stock reply to such challenges.

"I always say, 'Sure, I'm a Communist, if you accept my definition of communism.'" He then referred to Webster's definition of the word.

Webster defines communism as: "A system of social organization in which goods are held in common; the opposite of private property."

"We have communism in this country," he continued. "We have communism in the common ownership of streets, schools, public buildings and the like. And we are approaching communism in the ownership of the mines.e For that matter we should also have communistic ownership of communications, transportation and money."

ERP Offered 20 Million in Surplus Items

By The Associated Press

Twenty million dollars worth of industrial goods, made for Russia and stranded when Congress chopped off lend-lease to Moscow, has been offered to the European Recovery Program.

The War Assets Administration handed a list of the surplus items to the Economic Cooperation Administration, for purchase by any Marshall Plan country approved by ECA. It includes coal mining machinery, mine locomotives, electrical equipment and even a "package" power plant.

At the same time, officials disclosed, the WAA and ECA now are drafting a "memorandum of understanding." Its aim is to help steer surplus war goods, at bargain prices, into ECA's $5,300,000,000 recovery program.

Glenn Craig, acting industry director of ECA, reported arrival of the list. WAA officials gave the nature and amount of the materials. All are new and boxed for export.

They were the tag-end of the 280-million-dollar so-called "pipeline" program of postwar lend-lease to Russia. Congress, alarmed lest potential war materials be shipped to the Soviet, cut off funds for the shipment last year, while leaving the pipeline open to 11 other countries. The made-for-Russia goods finally were declared surplus.

Coal cutters worth one million dollars were put on sale last week and Austria, a Marshal Plan nation, was the highest bidder on about half this mine equipment.

Seven coal-mining hoists, which cost $361,000 each, and coal locomotives costing $750,000 are in the surplus.

A more ticklish disposal job is presented by parts of two oil refineries. Russia has most of both plants, but can't use them without the unshipped portions. The latter are unusable here because their electrical parts are built for 50-cycle power, the type used in Europe.

T-E-W Bill

It is difficult to believe that a majority of the members of Congress wish to face their constituents without having passed the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill. Yet that measure appears to be in grave danger of being talked to death. Several weeks ago it cleared the Senate. Recognizing both the importance of the comprehensive national housing policy which the bill outlines and the widespread public demand for its enactment, the House Committee on Banking and Currency took up the bill and hearings are going forward. With many witnesses yet to be heard, however, it is feared that the hearings may continue for another two weeks and thus seriously jeopardize the chance of getting it onto the statute books.

Considering the vast amount of work that has gone into the shaping of this bipartisan measure and the urgency of launching the 10-year housing program it would authorize, loss of the bill in the adjournment log jam would be a national misfortune. Laudable though it is to hear every viewpoint on legislation so intimately affecting the public interest, a time comes when talk has to be cut off in favor of action. In our opinion, that time is rapidly approaching in the case of the T-E-W bill. Its chance for passage should not be jeopardized merely to permit the repetition of arguments that have been heard many times already.

Nationalization

The resolution of the rail unions calling for nationalization of the roads is a warning signal, the significance of which should not be discounted. Government seizure of the roads, of course, has settled nothing. An agreement has still to be reached between the roads and the recalcitrant brotherhoods who have been enjoined from striking. The unions evidently believe that they could secure better terms under Government ownership than from private managements. They may be right; in fact, one of the most powerful arguments against Government ownership of railroads is that a government is tempted to yield to unreasonable wage demands under political pressure, even though such demands may result in operating deficits that have to be covered by public subsidies.

What the railroads need is a national wage policy based on consideration for the rights of the owners of the roads and of the public as well as the railway employes. Unless steps are taken to create this kind of balanced collective bargaining system, we shall inevitably end up with some form of Government ownership. The Washington Post has advocated strengthening of the labor laws by authorizing Government seizure of the roads in peacetime and outlawry of rail strikes. But it regards these expedients as emergency measures to be invoked only as a last resort. Obviously coercive action of this kind will not solve the problems of the roads. On the contrary, if seizure or settlements under compulsion come to be relied upon to settle disputes between the unions and the railways, both parties will eventually find themselves taking orders from the Government instead of compromising their differences by peaceful voluntary negotiation. They have already gone dangerously far in that direction.

Nationalization of the roads will not be prevented merely by calling attention to the weaknesses of Government-owned systems and emphasizing the greater efficiency and more progressive character of privately managed systems. For the advantages of private ownership will be lost, if private managements lose control over processes of wage fixation, as they already have in the field of rate fixation. In that event they would be effectually deprived of such power as they now possess to run their own business with a view of earning fair returns for their private shareholders.

Like it or not, and regardless of consequences, the country appears to be headed for nationalization of its railroads unless labor and management succeed in establishing methods of collective bargaining that can be relied upon to keep the railroads running without calling at frequent intervals for Government intervention in response to emergency calls.

The 37 Violations

The State Department's list of 37 Russian violations of treaties and agreements will probably give no new information to well informed citizens. But it is a very useful reminder to those whose memories are short. In these details showing the contrast between Soviet promises and Soviet performance any realist can see the reason why the making of real peace since the end of World War II has been impossible. The State Department has sometimes been shortsighted and has occasionally bungled its opportunities. But it is doubtful whether any conduct on the part of the United States would have changed this deplorable record on the part of the Russian authorities. Here is the primary reason for the failure of the peacemaking and for the necessity of rebuttressing our defenses. Since the statement is the logical answer to the recent Moscow propaganda offensive, the State Department could well have released it without waiting to be prodded by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Fundamental Error

The chief weakness of the District home-rule bill, which is scheduled to come before the House again this week as unfinished business, is the lack of information concerning it. The measure was taken up last week before a House that was unprepared to discuss it. "I do not profess to understand this so-called charter," said Representative Jennings, and his remarks amply substantiated his confession. Numerous complaints to the same effect were made by opponents of the bill. The tragedy of the situation is that this sort of performance is repeated every time an important District measure comes before the House. Members do not have time to study intricate local problems, and that is precisely why the farseeing sponsors of this measure wish to turn the task over to an elected District Council.

It happens, however, that no member of Congress has an excuse for failure to understand this particular bill. It is basic legislation for the Nation's Capital—the most important District bill to come before Congress in three quarters of a century. It has been in the course of preparation for more than a year. And so far from being a surprise to the Southern Democrats who are now denouncing it, the bill is a faithful response to that plank in the Democratic national platform of 1944 which read: "We favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia." Since that time President Truman has repeatedly emphasized his interest in the restoration of home rule here. The Auchincloss bill has been worked out as a nonpartisan project and has Democratic as well as Republican sponsors. It is particularly shameful, however, to see so many Democrats lining up to sabotage a measure which faithfully carries out a pledge they made to the people four years ago.

Even more disturbing than the stampede of those whose hostility is fortified by ignorance of the bill is the misinformation that is coming from ordinarily well informed legislators. Loose talk from the rabble-rousers was expected. It was not expected from men of Congressman Sam Hobbs' caliber. Mr. Hobbs has been in Congress for many years. He has been a judge. Yet he had the nerve to tell his colleagues that the home-rule bill is "hopelessly unconstitutional" and that the men who originally settled the District "came here with full knowledge of the fact that they were not to have the vote, nor any voice in the control of this area." His first statement flies into the face of the considered judgment of nearly every authority who has studied this constitutional problem. His second statement is utterly at variance with historical facts.

Instead of coming to the District with knowledge that they were to be voteless, the early residents were granted local suffrage. For 70 years they elected their councils and mayors, and if anyone ever thought it was unconstitutional that Neanderthal concept had long been buried and forgotten a hundred years ago. Correction of this misrepresentation is important because many members of Congress do not realize that what is now requested is a restoration in substance of what the founding fathers (Jefferson was President at the time) established. Unless this misconception is cleared away many votes against the bill may be cast on the uninformed assumption that a break with tradition and sound constitutional doctrine is intended. Surely it is not too much to ask that Congressman Hobbs and others who have fallen into this error will take the floor when the debate is resumed next week and set this matter straight.

Time For A Test Case

The testimony of William Z. Foster, chairman of the Communist Party of the United States, before the Senate Subcommittee conducting hearings on the Mundt-Nixon bill may well result in renewal of the demand that the Government bring a test case against the party for its failure to register as the agent of a foreign principal. Of course, Mr. Foster is not the real power behind the Communist movement in the United States. He falls into the category of domestic window dressing, and what he says regarding Communist policy or strategy can by no means be considered the last word on the subject. Indeed, some who read his statement that he had been a member of the Communist Party and its antecedents for 48 years recalled his denial some years ago that he was a Communist. But his testimony has given some valuable clews as to the subservience of the Communist Party in this country to the dictates of the Kremlin.

Cagey Mr. Foster refused to admit direct disloyalty to the United States. He said emphatically that the Communists would not fight against the Soviet Union, but he also said they would not fight in any "imperialistic war." In case of a war between the United States and Russia, he said, they "would fight to terminate that war at the earliest possible moment with a democratic peace. This, of course, was a clever bit of double-talk, for while it seems to reflect merely the traditional pacifist viewpoint, "democratic peace" in the jargon of the Communists means victory for the Soviet Union.

While Mr. Foster ridiculed the idea that there is a Communist conspiracy against the United States, as his Communist creed would require him to do, his testimony leaves a strong impression that he and his fellow party members adhere to Soviet policy in any and all circumstances. At one point he said that "Soviets don't make wars. No Socialist country makes wars. . . . Russia would never attack America." If war should develop between the two countries, it would be ipso facto "an imperialist war at the instigation of Wall Street." This blind devotion to the Kremlin certainly strengthens the suspicion that the Communist Party—even that portion of it which functions in the open—is in fact an agent of Moscow.

Governor Dewey, in his recent debate with Harold E. Stassen, directed attention to the fact that there are 27 laws now on the books that outlaw "every conceivable form of subversion." One of these requires the registration of agents of foreign principals, so that the people may readily detect propaganda in this country that is inspired by foreign governments or organizations. Why doesn't the Department of Justice test the standing of the Communist Party under this act? There is urgent need, as Justice Prettyman pointed out in his dissent in the Maritime Union case a few weeks ago, for determination of the status of the Communist Party on the basis of actual evidence. If the Department of Justice were moving resolutely in this direction, there would be less pressure in Congress to enact unsound legislation tending to make martyrs of Communists and fellow travelers.

Legislative Ouster

The House of Representatives has once more used its appropriation power to strike at employes of the Government's executive branch. When the House, in 1943, forced through Congress an appropriation rider forbidding the payment of any Federal salary to Messrs. Watson, Dodd and Lovett, designating these three individuals by name, the Supreme Court termed the action a bill of attainder and therefore unconstitutional. On Thursday, the House attempted circuitously to do much the same thing in respect of two Bureau of Reclamation officials—this time not naming them but imposing qualifications on their offices manifestly designed to exclude them. This will serve, we suppose, to get around the prohibition against bills of attainder; but it seems nonetheless an expression of vindictiveness unworthy of the United States Congress.

Michael W. Straus, Commissioner of Reclamation, and Richard L. Boke, director of the Reclamation Bureau's Sacramento regional office, have sought faithfully to apply to the Central Valley of California the acreage limitation provisions of the reclamation law. There are some California legislators, notably Senator Downey and Representative Elliott, who want to see the reclamation law ignored in the Central Valley, a law which, by the way, has had the support of Democratic and Republican Administrations alike for nearly half a century. They have been after the scalps of Mr. Straus and Mr. Boke. Now they propose to get them by attaching to the appropriation bill of the Interior Department a proviso that the top positions in the Reclamation Bureau be filled only by engineers of at least 10 years' engineering experience.

There is, of course, no reason to put management of the Reclamation Bureau into the hands of engineers. The top positions are essentially administrative in character; technical expertness would be wasted in them, and at the same time they require executive skill and experience which most engineers do not possess. They have been well handled in the public interest by the incumbents whose dismissal would benefit only those large landowners who have for so long been trying to bring about a repeal of the acreage limitations. This sort of legislative ouster of executive personnel is, moreover, flagrantly violative of the spirit of the Constitution's separation of powers principle.

Exports To Finland

The lifting of export curbs on shipments of industrial equipment to Finland serves a double purpose. Officially it is suggested that our action may strengthen the resistance of the Finnish government to pressure from Moscow. The second and more persuasive reason for relaxation of export controls is that it will help to build up Finland's industries. Thus it will be a step toward encouraging an expansion of trade between countries of eastern Europe and western European countries participating in the Marshall Plan.

It has been repeatedly emphasized that the success of the ECA program depends a large part upon the restoration of this east-west trade. Not only does it afford needed outlets for goods of the nations participating in the Marshall Plan, but the goods received in exchange reduce the drain on United States resources. Hence in selling productive equipment to nations behind the iron curtain—under safeguards, of course, against shipments of potential war equipment—this country is simply carrying out the stated objectives of the Marshall Plan—to assist European recovery.

Moreover, in the long run we do not doubt that the maintenance of trading relations between the United States and Russia's satellites will be influential in breaking down political hostility to the United States inspired by Communist propaganda.

Food And Population

Unquestionably war has been a force for economic disorder. In some cases of battle-damage it has been the chief force. But war is by no means the only force. Against the present-day clamor for rearmament and war preparation, I should like to present another cause of economic disorder—the increase in population.

World population has doubled in the past 80 years. In the same period (1870 to 1948) th population of the United States has been multiplied by 3½. During each year of war destruction, from 1939 to 1945, the number of human beings on earth rose by 17 million. The year of 1948 will see about 20 million more.

Population increase runs into a simple arithmetical formula. There are some 4000 million cultivable acres on the planet. About two acres are necessary for the adequate feeding of one person. Divide the number of available acres by two and you have as your answer the maximum number of persons that can be fed adequately —2000 million.

World population today is about a quarter billion more than that maximum. If you remember that food is rather unequally distributed and that some of it is wasted, you will understand why food specialists insist that even before the recent war two-thirds of the world's population was continuously undernourished.

Here is a basic economic factor: the tendency of food supply to lag behind population. Thomas Malthus wrote, in 1799, that the number of seats at nature's table is limited. If there are more people than seats, there will be a struggle to decide who shall get to the table. Those who reach the table will eat. The others will starve.

Several things have happened since 1799. The Mississippi Valley, Canada, Argentina and Australia have greatly augmented the old world food supply. Science has raised productivity. Transportation, packaging and refrigeration have increased food availability. But there are now three times as many human beings on the planet as there were in Malthus' day, and the number is increasing by 20 million each year.

"Oil For The Future"

Your May 26 editorial, "Oil For The Future," is challenging and thought-provoking. You say that "as a Nation we have become oil-happy." That's a striking statement. More seriously, this "happiness" is of greater extent than oil. As a Nation we rest on a fuel economy which includes oil, natural gas and coal. The whole of our production, including agriculture, is highly mechanized, which in turn means high fuel consumption.

It is folly to talk about more abundant living, a higher standard of living without accepting ever increasing fuel consumption. The only alternative would be cheaper labor. In the same proportion as our standard of living is higher than that of other countries, so is our fuel consumption, particularly oil consumption, higher. Our per capita oil consumption is now 10 barrels annually, compared with 1 barrel for the British and one third of a barrel for the combined citizenry of other countries.

Marine Carp Incident

I am appalled at the complacency of the public and of our newspapers toward the kidnaping of American citizens from the Marine Carp. It is distressing to see how the State Department can stoop to negotiate conditions with the Lebanese for the release of our citizens. Aside of the rights of these citizens to travel on our ships on the high seas and to a third country, the prestige of this country is involved in the boarding of our ship by an armed group.

Unless it is made clear that we demand the immediate release of all passengers removed from the Marine Carp, together with a proper apology for the attack, as well as payment of all damages and unless we show by word and action that we are prepared to back this demand by force, if necessary, our attitude will be interpreted as a sign of weakness and hesitation. We can then look forward to similar incidents with Arabs as well as other nations who wish to insult the United States.

Fair Trade in Liquor

Tuesday I dropped into the hearing on the fair-trade bill for the liquor industry in the District of Columbia. There was not a word of protest against this measure except from the District Commissioners and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. This was most interesting in the light of almost unanimous support from the industry itself, both wholesalers and retailers, and the total lack of opposition from citizens.

Why is the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on the opposite side of the fence?

Republican Crustaceans

Judging by the recent action of the House of Representatives concerning renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Act, it would appear that the Republican Party has finally worn out the shoes of cooperation and that the twin hairy heels of isolation and special interests are once more visible.

Four successive times repudiated in presidential elections, they have not yet, apparently, been able to change their archaic concepts of today's world. Perhaps after four more years in the wilderness, this Rip Van Winkle of a party will wake up, and shake the old, dead, cobwebs from its brain. However, it may well be that by then, poor old Rip will have died of malnutrition.

More seriously, I believe that millions of others, besides myself, who favor periodic changes of administration in the interests of preserving a free, dynamic, democratic, and, above all, progressing system, cannot in all conscience support pre-Darwin thinking in an atomic era.

Gentlemen of the Republican Party, let us all act our age, and, further, act for our age. E. D. L.

More Social Security

For the third time in three years now, President Truman has submitted to Congress his recommendations regarding social security. They are excellent recommendations and they ought to be enacted at this session of Congress.

Crux Of Air Power

It seems to me that the primary source of confusion in the current air power controversies is that the main question involved has never been squarely phrased and faced. The question is, to put it most simply: Can a hundred or so long-range bombers, with atomic bombs, win or substantially win a war within a matter of days, or at most within a few weeks, simply by the destruction of several dozen enemy cities?

The affirmative answer to this question is maintained by many within the Air Force, by a few naval aviators, and by a large number of aviation enthusiasts and writers in the public at large.

In support of the affirmative it is claimed that no nation can carry on war if a number of its major cities are laid waste, and that no defense can prevent a majority of the atomic bombers from getting through to enemy cities. It is also claimed, in effect, that there is not even any point in attempting the air defense of the United States, and that we should instead concentrate on building up a force able to make immedi.te decisive retaliatory attacks on the enemy.

The negative, or highly qualified affirmative to this question is maintained by many within the Air Force, by the bulk of the Navy's aviators, and by some aviation writers.

Supporters of this position point to our present lack of planes with the range to reach vital enemy cities, and to the fact that range can be attained only at the expense of speed and armament, which makes the bombers most vulnerable to enemy defenses. They note the great improvements in radar, in jet interceptors, in antiaircraft guns and rockets, and particularly the promising development of guided antiaircraft missiles.

They question whether we can risk losses of 25 to 50 per cent per mission, which when added to navigational, weather and aiming difficulties might result in a very low percentage of hits on targets—and consequent high waste of atomic bombs. They note that the destruction of German cities had very little effect on German production, and only a slow effect on morale. They doubt the desirability of writing off our own cities in advance, and believe that the enemy air force, rather than enemy cities, must be the primary target—a target most effectively attacked by smaller planes with nonatomic weapons.

The principal difficulty with those who maintain the affirmative position is that few of them appear to have the full courage of their convictions. If they did, we would not find them clamoring for a 70-group Air Force composed largely of small and medium sized planes which have no utility for intercontinental atomic bombing, or which are designed for the defense which is claimed to be "impossible."

In practice the supporters of the affirmative use it mainly as a large and vague club for smiting the defenders of "outmoded" armies and navies. They also use it to support the building up of an Air Force the bulk of whose costs have no more to do with atomic bombing than do the bulk of the Navy's planes.

We find the atomic argument used to justify the entire Air Force program per se, and to damn naval aviation per se, without inquiry into what parts of each service's expenditures actually contribute to atomic warfare. For example the Navy's proposed large carrier is clearly more relevant to intercontinental atomic warfare than the Air Force's 25 to 30 fighter and light bomber groups, yet the Air Force proponents of atomic warfare curse it loudly, but support the latter.

The Air Force's own program in fact straddles the issue, and amounts to saying that both the affirmative and the negative are correct, as long as the Air Force does them, but that both are wrong if naval aviation does them. Perhaps the affirmative of this question will prove in time to be correct, but let us not have the great potential of the atom used solely as a smokescreen for justifying all manner of Air Force weapons, and belitting all manner of naval air weapons.

The Road to Unreason

IDEAS HAVE CONSEQUENCES, by Richard M. Weaver. (The University of Chicago Press, $2.75.)

Mr. Weaver, a teacher in the college of the University of Chicago, and, I take it, a devout disciple of the Messrs. Hutchins and Adler, here undertakes to discover the philosophic origins of the present spiritual sickness of the Western world. The chief characteristic of this malady is a kind of universal irrelevance or disassociation, and this absence of pattern and unity is reflected in almost every aspect of modern life and most notably perhaps in art and literature. A Swiss writer, Max Picard, finds it of great significance that the dominant mental disorder of our times is schizophrenia, which is a progressive disintegration of the personality, and that the dominant physical disorder is cancer, which is the development of certain cell tissues without relation to the whole bodily organism. The analogy, of course, could be continued into the realm of natural science, where the very atom has been atomized. In short, by almost every avenue of thought modernity has fetched up at the brink of a cosmic nothingness.

Now the essential premise of Mr. Weaver's book is that there is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so; or, to put it in his own language, the political and moral chaos of our time is simply the realization of an ancient "metaphysical dream." Thus Mr. Weaver thinks he is able to trace the sickness to a philosophic infection contracted as long ago as the latter part of the fourteenth century when the doctrine of nominalism became ascendant in the English universities. Nominalism is one of several possible answers to the perennial riddle which has to do with the relation of ideas, or forms, to material objects. The extreme positions on this question are idealism, which insists that all materiality is an illusion and the only reality is mind, or spirit, and materialism, which holds that nothing exists that is not capable of sensible demonstration and quantitative measurement. In any philosophy which recognizes the existence of both form and matter the problem becomes one of exceptional difficulty yet of paramount importance. What it boils down to, however, is merely the question of the relation of the general and particular, that is to say of a category or class to its individual members.

If there is any quality which must be common to all members of a class, such as, let us say, the tabularity of all tables, then it seems to follow that in the hierarchy of truth the ideal form is somehow prior to the concrete object. Belief in this priority or transcendence of universal forms is what is meant by philosophic realism, and its various sects include the Platonists, who say that the material universe is merely an imperfect and transient reflection of a static and eternal world of ideas, and the Aristotelians, who hold that the created universe is a fusion of form and matter and that ideas do not exist apart from particular objects, save as they are abstracted from them by the mind in its process of deduction from sensible evidence. However, Mr. Weaver's point is that some realistic, or metaphysical, view of the world is necessary if we are to find any principle of unity and order in it or any system of values.

The becomes a little plainer if we examine the implications of the contrary view, which is nominalism. The nominalists say that categories have no reality either in nature or in the mind but are merely names given arbitrarily to groups of individual objects having perhaps more or less similarity but each in reality unique. Knowledge, therefore, is not to be sought in reasoning, that is to say in the association of ideas but in the investigation of particulars, that is to say by the experimental method—or, as Mr. Weaver puts it, brute fact supplants transcendent truth. Thus nominalism is the starting point of modern science, and to it we owe the great discoveries and technological revolutions of the last three centuries. The late Professor Whitehead observed that science is actually a revolt against reason and retains its anti-intellectual character to this day. But what Mr. Weaver strives to prove is that the revolt against reason has necessarily been accompanied by the gradual moral and political disorganization of society and the gradual disintegration of the Western mind.

For if there is—to repeat our example—no such quality as tabularity, if it is only by convention of speech that we distinguish between tables and chairs, or between either and the trees from which they are fashioned, then neither is there such a thing as a particular table. It is a fiction of unity imposed upon an indeterminate number of molecules; but molecule is only a name for a given association of atoms, and atom is only a name for positive and negative electricity. Thus the nominalist universe ends in a vast and meaningless explosion. In such a universe there is no justice, but only laws, and the laws have no more sanction than the power of the state to enforce them. There is no humanity, but only men; and thus the doctrine of equality, which is the political extension of philosophic nominalism, has led only to loneliness and frustration. In short, if we accept the logic of Mr. Weaver, nominalism is to blame for the total irrationality and all the incalculable horrors of our time.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

IT IS IMPORTANT to realize that for all practical purposes, Secretary of State George C. Marshall has not been in full control of the formation of American foreign policy for some time. The Palestine problem is the most delicate and dangerous single problem that has confronted this country for many years. If mishandled, it is capable of bringing down in ruins the whole laboriously erected structure of our foreign relations. Yet Palestine policy has lately in effect been formulated in a sort of no-man's land, somewhere between the Democratic National Committee and the White House.

This of course represents a return to the state of affairs that prevailed until a few months ago. Equally, of course, it will be denied that there has been any such return. And it is true that Secretary Marshall and his staff are still drafting the formal instructions for Senator Warren R. Austin at Lake Success.

This, however, does not represent real control of policy formation. Specifically, Secretary Marshall was expelled from the driver's seat with the appointment of Maj. Gen. John S. Hilldring as State Department Palestine adviser. This appointment was announced to Marshall and Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett by advance dope stories in the press, which contained the planted interpretation that the State Department was thus being superseded. Since then, on two vital steps, the advice of Secretary Marshall and his staff has once been ignored and has once not been solicited.

SPECIFICALLY, Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Lovett opposed the precipitate recognition of the state of Israel. They favored rapid recognition. But they wanted to notify London and other friendly and interested capitals, and to go through the normal formalities in Palestine. The President insisted upon dramatic, immediate action (or rather the President's personal advisers induced the President to act dramatically and immediately) because it was desired to placate the American Zionists and forestall the Russians.

Again Secretary Marshall and his staff were not consulted before the President invited Dr. Chaim Weizmann to the White House. Dr. Weizmann is one of the great men of our time, to whom any courtesy from President Truman must be an adequate tribute. But the fact remains that the Weizmann visit was at least made to appear a major development of American policy. Over this development, Secretary Marshall had no control. And this development, furthermore, came close to upsetting the crucial talks in London between Ambassador Lewis Douglas and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, which Secretary Marshall did control.

This sort of thing is all the more astonishing because President Truman is known to feel for Secretary Marshall something of the admiration of the lower classman for the football hero. There is, however, an explanation. The explanation will surely be denied even more vociferously than the existence of the state of affairs it explains; yet the facts have been learned on undoubted authority and deserve to be set down. The plain truth is that the New York Democratic leaders, Paul Fitzpatrick and Edward J. Flynn, some weeks ago gave the President a grim choice. They asked him to choose between again reversing his Palestine policy, or doing without the support of the New York delegation for his renomination.

THIS VITAL DEVELOPMENT seems to have coincided with the decision of David K. Niles, White House liaison with the Zionists, to leave his post unless Palestine policy was changed. Whether there was any connection is not known. At any rate, the President bowed to the New York leaders. And Niles, whose hand can be visibly traced in the events described above, stayed on at the White House.

It is difficult to foretell how long these influences will continue to mold American foreign policy. There may have been another shift in the unpredictable balance of power at the White House in the last day or so. There have been reasons for such a shift. Several American diplomats in leading positions offered their resignations as soon as they learned of the state of affairs in Washington and were only persuaded to stay on by the personal intervention of Secretary Marshall's staff. The President's desk is piled high with other danger signals from overseas.

It is further reliably reported—although this cannot obviously be confirmed with assurance—that Secretary Marshall has personally warned the President that he is running the gravest possible risks. The President's political position is already bad enough, but without Marshall, he would simply cease to exist. A warning from this source cannot, therefore, be ignored. Perhaps the President will change again. Perhaps he will permit Marshall to support the British resolution before the Security Council, with certain amendments, as is now planned. The test here is, in effect, between Marshall and Niles, who will certainly urge a different course. The outcome remains to be seen.

MEANWHILE, it must be said that none of the foregoing necessarily reflects, or is intended to reflect, on the wisdom or unwisdom of what has been done. The Palestine problem presents a choice, not between good and evil, but between evil, more evil and most evil. While Secretary Marshall and his staff were briefly in full charge of Palestine policy, they cannot be said to have achieved any triumphant success. As to the recent conduct of Foreign Secretary Bevin, it is indefensible.

Yet while the substance of what the President has done may be defended, the method has been downright shocking. The President has again shown the world the unpleasant spectacle of a divided Administration, making policy on a life and death issue for extraneous considerations and by palace maneuver. There can be no excuse for this.

Russell Sage College Honors Mrs. Meyer and Miss Lenroot

Agnes Meyer

Katharine Lenroot

Troy, N. Y., May 30.—Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post, and Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, received the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters at the thirty-first commencement of Russell Sage College here this afternoon.

President Helen McKinstry, in conferring the degree upon Mrs. Meyer, said: "Russell Sage College hails you today as an example of the American woman she wishes her graduates to become.

"Great ability and Barnard-Sorbonne-Columbia education have given you amazing versatility and success in your many endeavors as journalist, author and social worker. You have been active in politics and served as a delegate to a national Republican convention.

Honors Outlined

"Both President Hoover in 1929 and President Roosevelt in 1935 appointed you a member of the trust board of the Library of Congress. You were a member of the committee that founded maternity centers in New York City in 1912; chairman of the Westchester County Recreation Commission from 1923-41; appointed a trustee of Barnard College in 1933, and now a member of President Truman's Commission on Higher Education; a member of the Advisory Committee on the Federal Hospital Survey and Construction Act, and a member of the Executive Committee of the National Health Assembly.

"In 1947 the National Women's Press Club gave you its public service award. It cited you as a journalist, an investigator and constructive critic of social conditions, nationally known for your unsparing efforts to make America a better place in which to live."

Of Miss Lenroot, President McKinstry said:

"The analysis of statistics about children must be part of your daily work. But Russell Sage College honors you today because no child has ever become for you a mere statistic."

She continued, "Daughter of a former United States Senator, you really began your career as a public servant when you appeared—a junior at the University of Wisconsin—before the Wisconsin Legislature to speak for a minimum wage law.

After reviewing the many honors she has received the college president concluded, "Where there are children who need a sponsor, a protector or a friend, there your heart is and there also will be found your hand backed by the force of your dynamic personality and the power of the bureau of which you are chief."

Mrs. Catherine Drinker Boven, Bryn Mawr, Pa., author, and Miss Lucy Ella Fay, associate professor emeritus of the school of library service, Columbia University, received doctor of letters degrees.

Council to Dine

Mayor Merrill Harrison and the Laurel (Md.) City Council have been invited to the quarterly dinner of the Laurel Chamber of Commerce Tuesday at 7 p. m. at Laurel Masonic Temple.

Hill Gets Plea On Missions

The State and Defense Departments have sent Congress a last-minute plea for authority to send United States military missions to any country wanting them, it was disclosed yesterday.

The program, already approved by the House, has been sidetracked momentarily by bills Senate Republican leaders want to pass before the scheduled June 19 adjournment.

Informed quarters said Defense Secretary Forrestal will recommend action at a closed meeting of the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday. They also reported the State Department has ranked the plea high on a new list of legislation marked "must" for action this session.

The House bill would authorize President Truman to detail U. S. Army, Navy and Marine Corps personnel to "assist" foreign governments whenever such missions are deemed in this Nation's interest.

The Administration recommended the program to strengthen particularly, Near, Middle and Far Eastern countries—areas in a state of "intense" political and economic readjustment.

President Truman now has permanent authority to send military and naval missions only to the Philippines and other American republics. The proposed measure would place the sending of military aid to all other nations on a similar basis.

Three Labor Disputes Enter Crucial Stages This Week

By The Associated Press

Three of the Nation's toughest labor disputes head into crucial stages this week. They could tie the country's economy and defense plans in knots if walkouts actually occurred.

The disputes involve John L. Lewis' 400,000 soft coal miners, about 900 AFL atomic energy workers at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and 190,000 members of three railroad brotherhoods, now working only because the court ordered them to.

In addition to these three, the threat of a shipping strike which could stall the European aid program is in the offing. CIO contracts on all coasts expire June 15. A strike of CIO-National Maritime Union members on the Great Lakes already is under way.

The Lewis case is going before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough Wednesday. NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham is seeking another injunction to force Lewis to bargain with the Southern Coal Producers Association, representing one third of the Nation's bituminous coal output.

President Truman headed off a strike at Oak Ridge in March by invoking the emergency machinery of the Taft-Hartley Act for the first time, obtaining a temporary injunction.

The NLRB will conduct an election at Oak Ridge Tuesday to determine whether the employes would like to accept the employer's last offer. Regardless of the result, Attorney General Clark must ask the court after that to dissolve the injunction, freeing the workers to strike, if they wanted to, around June 7.

Ball Favors Vote Clause

By the United Press

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said yesterday he saw no need to repeal this year the Taft-Hartley law's requirement for union shop elections.

Although the National Labor Relations Board has a heavy accumulation of union shop cases clogging its machinery, Ball told a reporter he expected the board to be "over the hump by next fall."

One revision recommended was repeal of the requirement for elections before an employer may grant a union shop. Under one section of the act, a union shop can be granted only if a majority of all employes in a bargaining unit favor it in an NLRB election.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) and Representative Landis (R., Ind.), both members of the joint committee, are sponsoring bills to repeal this section

Bales Gives Brilliant Fete Finale

By Paul Hume

Richard Bales gave a brilliant finale to the fifth annual festival of American music last night at the National Gallery of Art.

Repeating Homer Keller's Clarinet Serenade, and William Bergsma's Paul Bunyan Suite, heard earlier this year, he listed new works of contrasting styles and sonorities. Bainbridge Crist's properly titled Festive Overture gave the evening a fine send-off.

Douglas Moore's Farm Journal was scored with perfect feeling for orchestral balances and bright, yet amazingly rich texture. It was amusing to hear a baby cry just as the section titled, "Up Early" began. The baby had to leave but those who stayed applauded the work roundly.

Cecil Effinger's Little Symphony is the work of a sound craftsman who manipulates his themes easily and with remarkable contrapuntal style. The andante is a prize moment, and the rapid sections openly witty. We should like to hear his latest symphony from the National Smyphony after its premiere by the Cincinnati Symphony this fall.

Ray Green received a first hearing of his New Set, a concerted work for viola and orchestra. It may have been the difficult acoustics of the West Garden Court, or it may be the writing, but we seldom heard the solo instrument in the first movement. The rhythmic figures underlying the movement, and the scoring were interesting enough, but we couldn't help wondering what the viola was doing.

The second and third movements came through clearly, and found the composer employing folk material of both the Negro spiritual, and the familiar blues type. The cadenza sections of the work are ingeniously set into the framework of the whole. George Wargo played the score in easy mastery of its changing styles, and with persuasive eloquence. The work would profit greatly by being heard in a better hall.

Mary Howe's Poem for two solo voices and orchestra concluded the program, and is the most beautiful piece, for our taste, we have heard from her pen. A free rhapsody, with text to match the mood of the music, it reminds us of Italo Montemezzi's magnificent opera, The Love of Three Kings. Scored in a manner to bring to mind a gorgeous Renaissance tapestry, it was handsomely sung by Katharine Hansel and Shirley Winston.

We have never heard Hansel sing so superbly and to say that Shirley Winston was a fine companion for her is high praise indeed for the newer singer. This is another score we should like to hear from the National Symphony, and with the same soloists.

Only $500 more is needed to assure Washington a four-weeks' Watergate summer concert season.

George R. Titus, chairman of the Cultural Development Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, said yesterday 27 subscribers have pledged approximately $14,000 to underwrite the series, in event of any possible deficit.

If the additional $500 is pledged, a conditional gift of the last $500 is available to bring the underwriting fund to the needed $15,000, Titus said.

Named to a coordinating committee to enlist community support for the 12 concerts scheduled to begin July 4 are Howard Mitchell, musical director of the series; Lee D. Butler, Al Loyd Symington and Frank R. Jelleff, representing the National Symphony Orchestra Association; Richard Linkraum, Mrs. Hazel Markel and Maurice B. Mitchell, representing WTOP, which will broadcast one hour of each concert; and Edwin N. Lewis and Titus, representing the Board of Trade.

alarm to residents living farther away from the broken dike.

They ran to the safety of the dike tops. Hundreds stood there, after the town was flooded, waiting to be taken to emergency headquarters in Portland.

Other hundreds were marooned in upstairs rooms, some on rooftops. The rescuers, fighting the surging waves and debris, were removing them slowly.

The Vanport community—which during the war was Oregon's second largest city with a population of 42,000 shipyard workers—is located at the northern end of Portland and situated inside a square formed by highway and railroad embankments and Columbia River dikes. The water that burst into the town came through a railroad embankment that had been weakened by water seepage. The north edge of the community abuts near the Columbia River.

Residents of the area had been reassured for two days that they were in no immediate peril. Red Cross officials, however, had prepared for evacuation for two days, but the dike break caught every agency unawares.

Gov. John Hall declared a state of limited emergency and immediately authorized the National Guard to use materiel and personnel as needed.

Very few of the scores of large two-story apartment units were still standing three hours after the water swept across the tablelike ground level of the area. When the water first swirled across the area, the residents in the second floors believed they were safe but as the level rose, it jerked the buildings loose and swirled them around like matchboxes. Some crumbled. Others turned over. Those that remained upright floated across the flooding area and smashed into others, folding up like accordions in the crush.

From the air, the great housing community looked like a child's toy village, crushed by a giant foot. The houses lay crushed at one end of the town.

Larry Moran, soaked to the skin, said the water was waist deep before the community knew the water had broken through.

No one even attempted to salvage his belongings. The people fled as they were. Mothers tossed their youngsters from windows to rescuers beneath. Men and women saw their children swept away from their grasp.

Meanwhile, the Columbia River and its tributaries spread new destruction for 100 miles down through central Washington State today as the known death toll in the Pacific Northwest floods climbed to 16.

during heavy rains, with no appreciable damage.

Presidential Gardens and Beverly Plaza Gardens in Alexandria had their usual share of flooded streets, in some spots "up to your knees," according to one telephone caller.

Other areas where flooded streets were reported: 42d st. and Benning rd. ne., the 3400 block of River rd., Alexandria; Benning rd ne. in the 4500 and 4600 blocks, the 1500 block of Fort Dupont st. se., and 3900 block of Minnesota ave.

Plane Lands on Fairway

A flier, hemmed in by rain and low clouds, made a forced landing about 7:30 p. m. at Congressional Country Club, River rd. and Bradley blvd., in Montgomery County. The pilot, Earl T. Chafer, 36, of Wyoming, Ill., was headed for Washington in his Swift single-engine plane with Miss Lova Foulke of Dayton, Ohio, at the time. He landed on the club's practice fairway.

Shafer, a former Army pilot injured in a burning transport in India, was on his way here to visit Col. and Mrs. J. P. Craig, 1733 20th st. nw.

Stalled automobiles were reported in most of the flooded areas. Water rose to as high as four feet in some places, including the 3900 block of Minnesota ave. se.

Tourists and residents alike, spurred by signs of sunshine during the morning, flocked outdoors, but the clouds broke at about 4:45 p. m.

Heavy Rain Elsewhere

The weatherman said the rain extended generally southeast of Washington, but also fell in New Jersey and Delaware.

The Associated Press reported that torrential rains hit southern Delaware cutting off three highways serving Dover, capital city of the State. Dover has a population of 5000.

The heaviest rain here fell during a thunderstorm, between 7 and 8 p. m. There were some light showers during the two hours preceding the main fall.

The odds are against rain for today, the weatherman predicted, but said the skies would continue cloudy, with temparatures in the middle 70s.

pany also must start construction of the line within one year and complete the project within 28 months after a certificate is granted.

Other conditions were that the company submit its final plan for financing the project and that, at least six months before starting operations, the company submit a satisfactory rate schedule.

The commission said the line will have a sales capacity of 325 million cubic feet of gas daily in the summer and of 340 million cubic feet in the winter. Most of the gas will be sold to distributing companies as a substitute for oil and other fuels now used in the production of manufactured gas.

Utilities to be served include the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., Public Service Gas and Electric Co., Philadelphia Electric Co., Long Island Lighting System, Kings County Lighting Co., Brooklyn Borough Gas Co., New York and Richmond Gas Co., and Elizabethtown Consolidated Gas Co.

The commission said the distributing company will save an estimated 28 million dollars in operating costs the first year and 35 million dollars the fifth year.

Last March 31 the commission held that the pipeline company had failed to show it had adequate supplies of gas. Since then, the commission said, the company has negotiated contracts with several gas suppliers and increased its total estimated reserves for a 20-year period to more than 2½ trillion cubic feet.

The 1840-mile pipeline will extend from the Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana to the east bank of the Hudson River at 132d st., New York City.

One on the Aisle—

Miss Hayes Rings Olney's Cowbells

By Richard L. Coe

WITH HELEN HAYES as good as her word and the Olney Theater living up to its promise that its refurnished home would be something special, the Nation's summer theater season is off to a joyous start.

Miss Hayes is her enchanting self in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire." The Olney's inclined floor, new center aisle and comfortable seats make country theatergoing a pleasure. Washington's summer theater, first of the cow circut to raise its curtain, is a happy prologue for a season that will keep actors and playgoers busy.

Not every play, alas, will be boasting the skilled make-believe of Miss Hayes. What a magical player she is, from her lilting walk to her versatile voice. The Hayes charm is something special and James M. Barrie's gentle comedy is a perfect fit. And why not? Her uncommon enchantment still drenches Barrie's "Dear Brutus" and his "What Every Woman Knows." There is an affinity between Barrie's elfin wit and Miss Hayes' piquant humor that makes his 1905 comedy sheer enchantment.

How one might react to "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" without Miss Hayes is a useless question, for Miss Hayes has guided its revival and by introducing a character to read the playwright's written notations has given it a touch of novelty.

"ALICE-SIT-BY-THE-FIRE." James M. Barrie's comedy in three acts. Presented by Richard Skinner, Redge Allen and Evelyn Freyman. Directed by Jerome Coray. Costumes by Lucinda Ballad. Settings by S. Syrjala. At the Olney Country Theater.

THE CAST:

The Playwright	Oswald Marshall
Amy Grey	Mary MacArthur
Cosmo Grey	Charles Nevil
Fanny	Gwen Emerson
Ginevra	Virginia Low
Nurse	Elfrida Derwent
Mrs. Grey	Helen Hayes
Col. Grey	John Williams
Stephen Rollo	Donald Murphy
Richardson	Elizabeth Ross

The story tells of an Army couple's return from India to England, where their children have been in school. How the two generations will mix is Barrie's slight yarn, just as it has been for comparable recent comedies like "Junior Miss," "Kiss and Tell" and "Dear Ruth."

The Sentimental Touch

It's a pleasantly sentimental evening, too, out at Olney, for playing the returned mother's daughter is Miss Hayes' own junior miss, Mary MacArthur. Miss MacArthur has traces of her mother's sweet charm, but, unlike her physically, Mary's is a bloom of her own. It seemed to me she was most effective in her scenes with her mother, an exquisite timing between the two suggesting endless rehearsing for the play's best moments. An unobtrusive smoothness makes their moments together happily delightful. It's a tough challenge being the actress-daughter of an incandescent player and her future roles at Olney will bring out more how Miss MacArthur is progressing.

The splendidly professional cast (all are experienced performers) is no end helped by John Williams, who plays the star's husband. His is the just-right returned colonial, not overdone on the beefy side, just neatly roasted.

An outstanding performance is given by Elizabeth Ross, who plays an important second act role as hungry lodging-house slavey inclined to take every word at its face value. It's character acting of skill from the Catholic University player who has gone on to several Broadway roles.

A Winter-Season Curtain

As the proper young man whose intentions are misconstrued by the daughter, Donald Murphy indicates the Olney group has an able young man for its heroes. Oswald Marshall does the playwright's directions with quiet charm and there are capable performances from Charles Nevil, Gwen Emerson, Virginia Low and Elfrida Derwent.

With Lucinda Ballard's skilled taste inspiring the costumes and two amusing sets from S. Syrjala, the season's initial offering sets a high production standard. And you're bound to admire the new curtain, which rises into a lofty fly, no longer parting to the sides as one usually expects in make-do summer theaters.

If you've not already latched onto Olney tickets, you may be able to find some turn-ins at Ballard's 1300 G st. At all events, Miss Hayes is giving us some refreshing hours of escape and the Olney's renovated theater promises to be one of the pleasantest refuges of a Washington summer.

Class Told Freedom Rests on Character

Annapolis, Md., May 30 (AP).—Those who follow Communist principles have the cart before the horse, but the movement has become powerful enough to set the world on edge, Chaplain Everett P. Wuebbens of the Naval Academy said today.

Preaching the baccalaureate sermon to 410 graduating midshipmen, Commander Wuebbens declared true freedom rests on principles that have not changed in 1900 years.

Pointing out that it was 100 years ago that Karl Marx issued his manifesto, the chaplain said:

"It is the naive idea that slavery and injustice is due simply to a wrong system.

"Those who support it say: Change the system and men will be freed; don't worry about personal freedom, just build a free society, a free economy; don't worry about principles either, just force your plan upon people, liquidate those who will not accept it, and eventually you will have free men and women."

The chaplain said that there are those who say that the doctrine "can and will destroy us."

"That may yet become true," he added, "but this is true right now: It can and may save us—save us from ourselves, in that it compels us to remember what so many who believe in freedom have forgotten; this, namely, that even in a free society it takes character to make personal freedom work and that our other liberties cannot survive unless we do make it work."

Commander Wuebbens noted that June Week falls within the anniversary of the battle of Midway in 1942 and told the graduating class:

"We believe you will not hesitate, even if you are some day faced with a situation like that other fourth of June morning six years ago when John Charles Waldron, '24, with deathless courage led Torpedo Squadron 8 in the historic attack that knocked an entire armada of enemy ships off balance.

"Our tradition is such, that we take it for granted that you will be ready to die for freedom if it comes to that, but won't you live for freedom? That is the challenge of this last undergraduate chapel hour for you men of '48."

Awards for excellence in scholarships, sports, and extra-curricular activities will be presented Monday in Thompson Stadium. A demonstration of trick and fancy shooting will follow at Farragut Field.

AU Graduates Hear Marsh

Every man should develop a personality worth expressing itself, President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University yesterday told American University seniors.

Delivering the senior class baccalaureate in Metropolitan Methodist Church, Dr. Marsh counseled the graduates that "the self worth expressing has in it something of self-conquest, self-mastery and self-sacrifice."

Dr. J. Warren Hastings, rector of the National City Christian Church, 14th st. at Thomas cir. nw., told about 350 University of Maryland seniors last night that a student must decide what he thinks of himself, his neighbor and his God before he has really started to live.

Seniors, university faculty members and friends crowded into St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in College Park for Dr. Hastings' baccalaureate sermon on "Christian Imperatives," that concluded on the note that "a man's potentialities are in direct line with his highest aspirations."

Dr. Harris Hits GOP 'Sabotage' of Tariff

The temptation to put America first may result in putting America last, the pastor of Foundry Methodist Church said yesterday in a sermon attacking congressional attempts to "sabotage" reciprocal trade agreements.

"It begins to look as if some of our politicians have not yet learned the lesson that America's prosperity depends upon the world's prosperity," Dr. Frederick Brown Harris asserted. "The Nation must resist the temptation to put profits first."

"The work of removing world trade barriers to make possible a freer flow of world trade is being sabotaged by Congressmen who apparently have their eyes more on the next election than on the next generation.

"If the efforts of these Congressmen are successful, the world's trust in us, which is our greatest treasure, will be blasted and the world's rising hopes destroyed.

"If the reciprocal trade agreements are sabotaged the world's best chance to banish want and war have been destroyed.

"Politicians need the perspective that a true celebration of Memorial Day will furnish to eyes that are afflicted with national astigmatism."

Nats Thump Bosox, 8-1, Sweep Four-Game Series

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE ENIGMA of the Red Sox, who were supposed to battle the Yankees for the pennant and are now a seventh-place club 10 games behind the league-leading Athletics, is being stared grimly in the face by Manager Joe McCarthy.

POVICH

"I've seen this happen to good ball teams before," said McCarthy yesterday. "I wouldn't have believed that one of my Yankee teams could lose 11 games in a row, but they did—in 1945."

It's a long way until September, when pennants are won, McCarthy observed. "However, we can do ourselves a lot of good in June," he said. "We're too good a ball club to be out of the first division." He laughed off the report that he was quitting the Red Sox in high disgust and returning to his Buffalo farm estate.

"The people who started that story don't know me," said McCarthy. "I've retired from winning ball clubs, but I never quit a loser. They ought to know that. They'll never say I quit when the going was tough."

McCARTHY HASN'T been making as frequent appearances on the field as he did with the Yankees when they were winning pennants, and he was squawking loudly at every decision he didn't like, even when the Yankees had a nine-run lead.

"That's right," he said. "You won't see me running out there to squawk at the umpires when I'm down in the second division; they'd say I can't take it when my club is down—that I only show myself when I have a winner." He's sensitive about that.

The Red Sox haven't been getting any of the best of the breaks, he pointed out. "How about that ninth inning on Saturday?" he said. "Washington gets the tying runs on base with two lucky hits—a bad hop and a single to right field when a guy is trying to duck a pitch. I've seen that happen before. When it does, the team that gets those kind of breaks in the ninth always wins. Washington needed only three runs, but it wouldn't have made any difference if they had needed eight—they'd have got 'em."

CATCHER BIRDIE TEBBETTS says, too, that the Red Sox have been an unlucky club. "How about that double-header we blew to the White Sox out West by scores of 4-3? The Yankees preceded us into Chicago and beat 'em twice with long hits. The wind was blowing out in a gale when the Yanks were there. When we moved into town it was still blowing a gale—but toward the plate. We hit a dozen long balls that day and they were all caught."

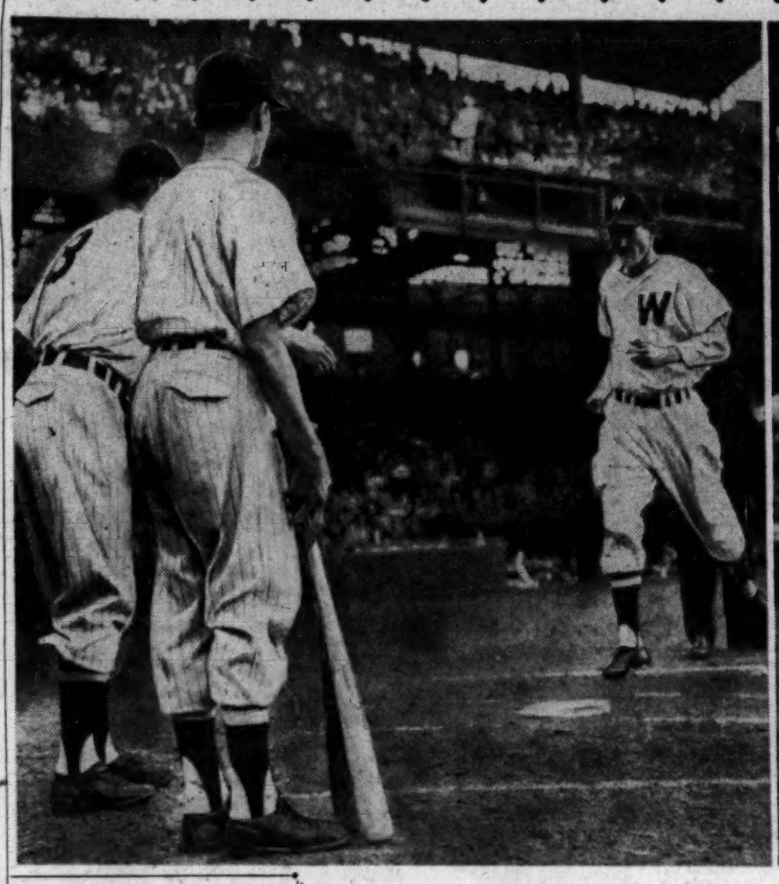
What baffles Tebbetts chiefly, though, is the Red Sox's lack of big innings. "We're a club that figures to get a lot of runs in bunches, but we aren't getting those big innings. Somebody makes an unconscious play against us every day to break it up. I wouldn't trade our batting order for any club's in the league, yet we're not making a lot of runs."

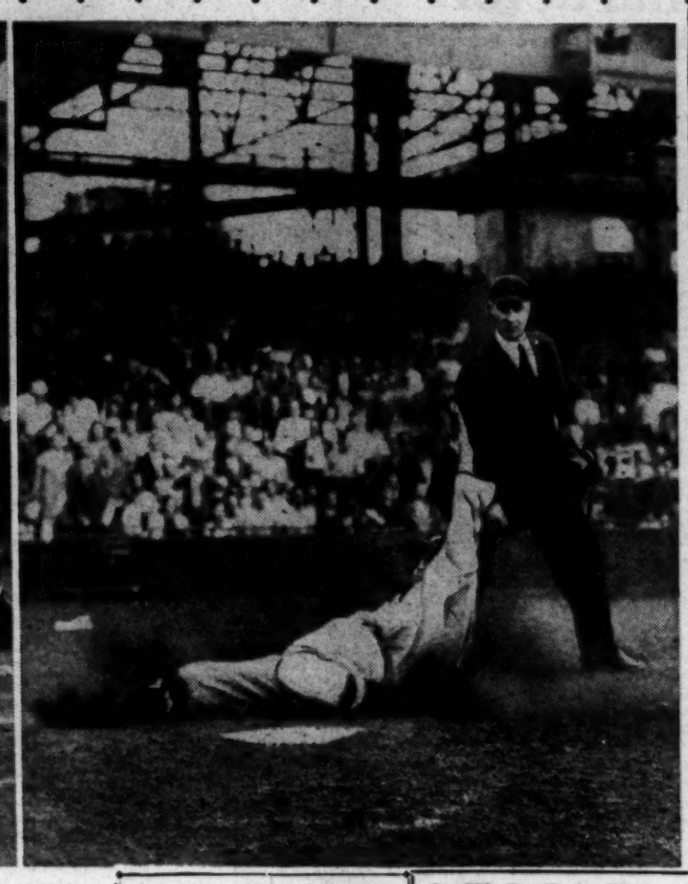
What everybody admits is that the Red Sox are in foul shape in a pitching way. Tex Hughson is already down in the minors, and Dave Ferriss in four starts has never gone more than six innings this season. Jack Kramer, the purchasee from the Browns, has won only two of his six starts, and Joe Dobson qualifies as the leading pitcher on the club with a mere four wins and four defeats.

ANOTHER CATCHER, Rick Ferrell of the Nats, has a different idea of the Red Sox lack of success. "They're all tighter than drums up there at the plate except Ted Williams," Ferrell observed. "Williams is the only man that's loose and hitting well. The pressure is beginning to affect those other guys."

Certainly there is ample evidence in the Boston batting averages that the Sox aren't hitting. Stan Spence with a .271 average is runner-up to Williams on the club. Bobby Doerr isn't hitting .260, Johnny Pesky and Vern Stephens are below .265, and when First Baseman Jake Jones was replaced for nonhitting his substitute was Bill Goodman, who is currently batting .250.

You'd have to say the Red Sox are the flops of the season to date. The hitting that was supposed to counterbalance the dubious pitching hasn't developed. They've lost 10 of their last 13 games. They're almost out of the pennant race before they could get in it. McCarthy's managerial genius can't think any runs across the plate apparently.





Early Wynn took advantage of the presence in town of the low-down Red Sox yesterday to cure his own three-game losing streak and lift the Nats to a completely satisfactory 8-1 victory, their fourth straight.

The hapless Red Sox, who are supposed to hit home runs, didn't—and the Nats did, to the high delight of their 11,340 customers. Rookie Ed Stewart whacked them into a 2-0 lead with a swat over the right field wall in the first inning and Gil Coan bashed one to the same sector in the eighth.

The peak individual performance was Wynn's, however. His fast ball became alive again after a month's hide-out and until two were out in the eighth the only hits the Red Sox could claim were a pair off Stan Spence's bat.

Walk Costs Wynn Shut-Out

The only walk he issued cheated Wynn out of a shut-out in the eighth when Birdie Tebbetts followed with an infield single. Pinch-hitter Wally Moses clubbed a single to right.

The Red Sox, who entrained for Philadelphia after the game went away empty-handed in the four-game series here. They started Denny Galehouse and Stewart wrenched two runs out of him sudden-like, after two were out in the first. His lusty homer scored Gil Coan who had just singled.

All told, the Nats raked four Boston pitchers for 12 hits, but they gave Wynn nothing more to work with than a 2-0 lead until the seventh inning. At that point they only had four hits themselves, but they reared up and knocked Galehouse out of the scenery.

Stewart touched off that assault with a double to right and a bit later Wooten fetched him in with a single. Evans and Sullivan also singled, and Eddie Yost drove in the third run of the inning with a single to left that put Galehouse away.

Southpaw Earl Johnson relieved Galehouse and got his in the eighth when Coan saluted him with his homer. After Vernon beat out a hit and Johnson was in the process of walking Wooten, he literally came a cropper.

On a pitch to Wooten he turned his left ankle and had to be helped off the field. Rookie Southpaw Chuck Stobbs moved in, completed the pass to Wooten and then pitched a two-run triple to Evans in deep center.

Wynn had no trouble to speak of with the Red Sox in the ninth, retiring Ted Williams on a ground ball to leave that worthy gent hitless all afternoon.

IN SHORT . . . Junior Wooten was in center field for the Nats while Carden Gillenwater rested in slippered-ease on the bench. Gillenwater was the victim of three corn extractions on his left foot . . . Former Nat Bill Hitchock was at third for the Red Sox, on account of Johnny Pesky's leg injury . . . Ed Stewart's home run and Gil Coan's later wallop was merely the fourth and fifth of the season for the Nats who trail the league in the homer department . . . On the bench before the game, Stewart predicted, "Maybe I'll hit one over that fence today. It doesn't look too tough." . . . The Nat's four straight from the Red Sox equals their longest winning streak of the year. . . . Chic Pieretti, aching for a starting job all season, gets that chance today at Yankee Stadium where he will pitch one of the games of double header . . . Sid Hudson will pitch the other.

Pirates Stop Cards Twice, 9-3 and 7-6

Pittsburgh, May 30 (AP). — The Pittsburgh Pirates whittled the St. Louis Cardinal's league lead to a half game today as they dumped the Redbirds in both ends of a doubleheader, 9 to 3 and 7 to 6.

A delighted crowd of 33,584 saw the Pirates complete a sweep of the series with the Cards whom they had been unable to beat previously this season.

Stewart Goes to Town

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Outfielder Ed Stewart is completing his circuit jaunt in the first inning against Boston in the photo on the left. He smacked a homer with Gil Coan aboard to give the Nats a 2-0 lead. Coan (No. 3) and the Nat batboy wait to greet him. On the right, Stewart slides in safely with another tally in the seventh. He doubled and scored on Junior Wooten's single. LaMotta 3-1 Choice Tonight Over Stribling at Ball Park

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Ken Stribling, who doesn't believe all the things he's heard about Jake LaMotta, and Jake LaMotta, who's heard practically nothing about Ken Stribling, fight here tonight.

The locale is Griffith Stadium's boxing ring, where Signor LaMotta and the ambitious Washingtonian take pot shots at each other for the customary 10 rounds, or fewer.

The odds are 3-1 that LaMotta, making his first start since last November, marks his reentry into the ring with a triumph and even money that Stribling isn't around for the full 10 rounds.

Such computation is either a tribute to LaMotta's ability or a belief that the 25-year-old local lad is not a fit opponent. Be that as it may, a gathering of some 9000 is expected and if that many turn out for Gabe Menendez's first outdoor show, the Turner's Arena matchmaker won't be too deeply concerned with what they think.

Stribling, hard-hitting gamester, has the chance of his life. He knows what a victory over LaMotta would mean to him. He has trained diligently and actually believes he can tag LaMotta.

"Boxing is like baseball," he said last night. "As long as you're swinging you're dangerous and I aim to be swinging all the time."

Heafner's 272 Wins Colonial Golf Tourney

Fort Worth, Tex., May 30 (AP).—Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., shot his fourth straight subpar round today to win $3000 first money in the $15,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament and set a record for the 72-hole grind at 272.

The big blond, whose putting kept him ahead of the field all the way, had the only round in the field of 32 players that went under regulation figures—a 1 below 69 to go with his 67, 68, 68 of the first three days.

He finished six strokes ahead of Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., the player whose course mark of 279 he bettered, and Stewart (Skip) Alexander of Lexington, N. C., who closed out with 72 and 70 respectively. These two divided second and third money — $1700 apiece. They had 278 for the 72 holes.

Hogan remained the second high money winner of the year as he ran his earnings to $15,597.50, while Alexander moved up to sixth place with a total of $9902.50. Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, the No. 1 money winner, kept his place by tying for fourth with Herman Keiser, Akron, Ohio, at 280. He received $950 and that made his total for the year $15,714.99.

Heafner used 114 putts in the four rounds and never had more than 31 for any 18 holes on the 6857 Colonial Country Club course. Heafner, by taking down first money, moved up to ninth place in money winning for the year with $6402.25. It was his first tournament victory since March of 1947 when he won the Jacksonville (Fla.) Open.

The largest gallery in the history of the course saw the last round. It was estimated 8000 persons crowded No. 18 green.

At Eight In a Row

Yanks Halt A's, 2-1, After Losing, 7-6

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP).—Rain helped the New York Yankees shatter the Philadelphia Athletics' eight-game winning streak today as the umpire ended the second game of a twin bill after five innings with the Yankees ahead, 2-1.

TheA's came from behind twice in stirring rallies to win the opening game, 7 to 6, in 10 innings.

A single by Sam Chapman in the tenth inning gave the Atletics the first game.

Nelson Potter, hurling in relief of Carl Scheib, received credit for his second victory over the world champions in three days. Pete Suder hit a two-run homer for the A's while the Yanks' Tommy Henrich sent the game into overtime with a ninth-inning four-bagger.

It was Vic Raschi who stopped the Athletics' win string at eight just as he did to their 10-game streak earlier in the month. The Yankees' swift righthander cut down the A's with three hits to send 28,586 rain-drenched fans home none too happy.

The Yanks' two runs came across in the fourth inning after Bob Savage had held them hitless for 3 1-3 innings.

Yugoslavs Say Enemies Infiltrate Soccer Crowds

Belgrade, May 30.—Enemies of the Yugoslav government are infiltrating soccer crowds, spreading seeds of discord by shouting coarse and provocative expressions against the army team, the organ of the National Front, Twentieth of October, complained yesterday in an article entitled: "Negative Occurrences in Our Physiculture."

Without going so far as saying that these fans are in the pay of a western imperialist power, Twentieth of October nevertheless says that the recent behavior of the spectators at soccer matches is something to warrant investigation and to suggest that those who display "unobjectivity" be barred from the field.

Stymie Out To Crack Jinx

New York, May 30 (AP).—The eyes of the turf world will be focused on Belmont Park tomorrow when Stymie makes his final bid to win the $50,000 Suburban Handicap.

All Stymie has to do tomorrow is beat six stellar rivals in the 1¼-mile classic carrying top weight of 128 pounds and giving away as much as 19 pounds.

The world's leading money-winning thoroughbred's cash register total currently shows $849,635, and with seven starters tomorrow the net value will be $40,800.

Opposing Stymie will be four rivals he whipped in the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont May 22, Calumet Farm's Faultless, 118, William L. Bann's Gallorette 115, Deering Howe's Donor 109, and F. W. Hooper's South American Colosal, 117.

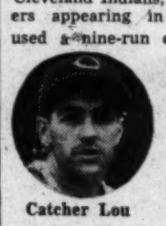
9-Run 8th Wins Second for Tribe

Chicago, May 30 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians, with 19 players appearing in the lineup, used a nine-run eighth inning to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 13-8, in the second game of a doubleheader today. Chicago kayoed Bob Feller to win the opener, 4-2, before 36,780. In the second game lineup juggling, Shortstop-Manager Lou Boudreau was Cleveland's catcher for the final two innings. Bob Lemon, one of six Indian pitchers, won his second game in two days.



Catcher Lou

Lemon pitched the last two frames and ran his string of scoreless innings to 26 in taking his seventh victory—tops for the majors to date.

Carrying only two catchers, Boudreau was forced into the receiving chores. Jim Hegan was lifted for a pinch-hitter and Joe Tipton was hit on the left wrist by Earl Harrist, fourth of five Chicago pitchers.

Chicago scored six runs in the second game's first inning on two hits and five walks.

Al Gettel and Steve Gromek followed Starter Bill Kennedy to the mound before the side was retired after 11 White Sox batted.

Fourteen Indians batted in the big eighth.

Allie Clark, one of three pinch batters for the inning and six for the game, rapped two of five singles.

The White Sox used five pitchers in the game and all of them saw action in this inning. They contributed four walks to the fireworks.

Bob Gillespie was pitching when the inning began and he was quickly followed by Earl Caldwell, Bill Goodwin, Earl Harrist and Fred Bradley. Caldwell wound up the loser.

The parade of hurlers forced Manager Ted Lyons to change his announced mound choices for tomorrow's holiday doubleheader.

Boudreau Catches For Two Innings

Goodwin and Harrist were scheduled to work tomorrow, but after the treatment the Indians dealt up were scrapped in favor of Orval Grove and Bill Wight.

John Berardino led the Tribe swatting with three hits, a triple and two singles. Cleveland made 14 hits to Chicago's 5.

In the first game Feller pitched five scoreless innings in running the White Sox total 28 before the home team chased Bob with four runs. Cass Michaels opened with an infield single.

Ralph Hodgin, a pinch batter, and Floyd Baker both walked to fill the bases.

Michaels scored on Tony Lupien's fly. Taft Wright was purposely passed, refilling the bases. Ralph Weigel's single was good for two runs, and Bob Kennedy's double scored Wright with the fourth run.

Crowd of 175,000 Expected

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (AP).—The world-famous 500-mile automobile race will be decided tomorrow for the thirty-second time at the Indianapolis Speedway, with 33 of the fastest racing cars ever built striving for victory.

The tiny, low-slung racers and the spirited dare devils driving them will be competing in this risky contest for prizes totaling more than $160,000, richest ever offered.

Attendance for the Nation's biggest single day sports spectacle may reach a record 175,000. All 65,000 reserved seats, ranging in prices up to $15, have been, sold.

The winner will receive $20,000 first prize, plus $100 for every lap in which he leads. The winner usually is out in front long enough to make his total earnings $30,000 to $60,000.

Lot of Firsts

The starting field is the fastest in 500-mile race history. It will be the first to include two 130-mile-an-hour qualifiers. It will contain ten brand new automobiles and nine new drivers. It will have 20 money-winners from former speedway races and the one-two punch of last year's race—Mauri Rose, South Bend, Ind., the winner, and his teammate, Billy Holland, Reading, Pa. Holland finished second in one of the most sensational and most discussed finishes in the classic's history.

The weather forecast was for slightly cloudy skies, with temperatures in the 80's, but no rain.

The race itself will start at 11 a. m. (Central Daylight Time), when the pace setting car drops on the apron at 95 miles an hour and Starter Seth Klein waves the racers away on their hazardous 500-mile journey at terrifying speeds.

New Record Expected

Race fans expect to see the late Floyd Robert's record winning speed of 117.2 miles an hour of 1938 smashed. For the first time th y hope to see the leader averaging better than 120 miles an hour past the halfway mark.

Rose, the 1947 winner, driving the same blue crown spark plug special which carried him to victory last year; Duke Nalon, Los Angeles; Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif.; Ted Horn, Paterson, N. J., and Holland all rated high tonight among the favorites.

Nalon, at the wheel of a Novi grooved piston special, figured because of his speed of 131.603 miles an hour in qualifying, greatest of the qualifying trials.

Mays is driving his eleventh Speedway race, and Horn is competing for the tenth time.

WOL Carries Race

Today's 500-mile auto race in Indianapolis will be broadcast to Washington exclusively over WOL. The local Mutual network will cover the race in four sections. First broadcast will be from 11:45 a. m. to 12:15 p. m. The race starts at noon, Washington time. The other broadcasts will be for 15 minutes, beginning at 1:30, 2:45 and 4 p. m. WOL is located at 1260 on the dial.

THE BRONX BULL—The ferocious looking chap here is Signor Jake LaMotta, the Bronx Bull. LaMotta makes his Washington debut tonight, taking on Ken Stribling for 10 rounds or less at Griffith Stadium lifted, LaMotta has pared himself down from 178 pounds to 163, which he expects to weigh tonight.

LaMotta Rated 3 to 1 Tonight

Although Lightweight Billy Fox was awarded a four-round TKO over him in the bout which brought about his temporary disenfranchisement in New York, LaMotta has never even been knocked down in almost 90 fights. He's fought the best in his weight range and is the only man ever to whip Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson.

Pointing for Title Shot

Owner of a stadium and an arena and a fighter who manages himself, much to the disgust of the Fight Managers Guild, LaMotta wants one more thing before he retires from the ring—the middleweight title.

His suspension in New York comes off June 21 and he's already asking for a shot against the winner of the Zale-Graziano scrap June 9. He also wants to square accounts with with Fox. Of immediate concern to him, however, is tonight's business with Stribling.

"I'll dust him off quick," he said last night, looking like he meant it.

Jimmy Cooper, the hot-shot local featherweight, headlines the supporting card, facing Joe Cay, a Britisher, in an 8. One five and three fours are also on the show.

The men's doubles crown was captured by Jaroslav Drobny, Czechoslovakia, and Lennart Bergelin, Sweden. They downed the Australian combination of Harry Hopman and Frank Sedgman, 8—6, 6—1, 12—10.

The women's doubles victory gave United States tennis aces two of the four main titles.

Frank Parker, America's No. 1 player, captured the men's singles yesterday by defeating Drobny, 6—4, 7—5, 5—7, 8—6.

Mme. Nelly Landry, top-ranking French feminine star, won the women's singles with a 6—2, 0—6, 6—0 conquest of Miss Fry.

30 Entered In Marathon

Thirty of the East's topflight distance runners will compete in the 10-mile modified marathon being staged by the District Amateur Athletic Union in conjunction with the Masonic Night of Thrills June 18 at Griffith Stadium.

The District's nine-man delegation is headed by George Shorb, former District AAU 10-mile champion.

John F. Leiss, chairman of the event, announced yesterday that a preview of the modified marathon would be staged over the course Sunday when the White Horse Club of Baltimore will compete with runners from the Washington Track and Field Club.

Proceeds from the Masonic Night of Thrills go to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire ave. ne.

Hartung Beats Phils For Giants

Schedule Favors Coolidge

Interhigh Baseball Playoffs This Week Close Local Season

The Interhigh League baseball playoffs Tuesday and Friday bring the scholastc spring sports season to an end locally.

Championship contenders have been pared down to three with defending titlist Calvin Coolidge in the best position to walk off with the honors for the third straight year.

The two other aspirants, Eastern and Anacostia, meet Tuesday at 3:15 p. m. at Griffith Stadium for the right to meet Coolidge in the finals Friday.

Eastern and Anacostia have each lost one game, so Tuesday's loser will be eliminated.

Coolidge, beaten twice during the regular campaign, is unbeaten in the playoffs. So Coolidge can lose Friday's game and still grab the championship by winning an extra playoff game a week from today. However, if the defending champs win Friday, they'll take the title.

Tuesday's game is the third meeting between Eastern and Anacostia this season. Eastern nosed out Anacostia, 4-3, during the regular season, and won, 11-0, in the opening playoff game.

Eddie Kline, who pitched a one-hitter in that opener, will get the starting assignment against Anacostia. He'll be opposed by George Sengstack, who blanked Tech Friday.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

STATE: No major layoff will be made in this department despite the fact its budget was cut about $1,100,000 to pay salaries in this city. The reduction represents the funds to pay the salaries for about 350 employes.

Kluttz

However, State hasn't filled many vacancies here since the original House action in slashing its budget. Some of these jobs will now be abolished. In addition State will transfer some of its employes in foreign relief work to the Economic Cooperation Administration, and others will be given new jobs in its Voice of America office, which is being expanded.

Senate-House conferees decided on a 20-million-dollar budget to pay salaries here. State funds to pay foreign service personnel also were cut more than a million. There will be shifts in that service where expansions were planned, but no layoffs of American employes.

CAPITOL HILL: The Senate Appropriations Committee is working up a classification plan to cover salaries to be paid to Capitol Hill employes. The plan provides minimum and maximum salaries to be paid. It's designed to stop individual requests by members to raise the salaries for favorite employes. The plan, however, will give pay raises to some people.

COMMERCE: Eighty of its employes who administer the second decontrol plan are again on the hook. That plan expired by law over the weekend. All of the employes were given "provisional" layoff notices a month ago. However, Congress seems sure to extend it.

NOTES: The American Federation of Labor has put up funds to hire three additional organizers for its American Federation of Government Employes. Meantime, the AFL is mapping plans for a big drive to organize Federal workers. . . . The Society for Personnel Administration will hold a dinner meeting Thursday in the South Agriculture Cafeteria. The speaker will be Tom Spates, personnel director of General Foods. . . . The President's order on overseas personnel gives Federal agencies the authority to pay those employes a differential up to 25 per cent.

BACK PAY: Congress has given final approval and has sent to the White House the Thye bill, which guarantees full pay for the time lost of any employe who is illegally fired and who is ordered restored to his job by the Civil Service Commission. The bill is not retroactive.

NOTES: Dr. Albert R. Merz, an authority on heavy chemicals, and Bessie M. Gries, an editorial assistant, have both retired from the Tariff Commission. . . . The Naval Ordnance Laboratory has openings for patent advisers in grades P-2 to P-5. Get details from its personnel office at the Naval Gun Factory. . . . The Senate has approved the conference report on the bill that would allow a physically handicapped person to be appointed for at least a year to a Federal job. The appointee under the bill wouldn't need to pass a competitive Civil Service test, but he would have to be okayed in advance by Civil Service.

TREASURY: Its budget as approved by the Senate would not force the Internal Revenue Bureau to lay off anyone at its headquarters here. The House-approved bill would require a layoff of about 200 employes. The matter is now being debated in conference.

In supporting the Senate bill that would provide for 5000 additional Revenue employes, Senator Myers (R., Pa.) had this to say, which is of interest to all Federal workers:

"I am becoming somewhat weary of hearing Federal employes condemned merely because the Administration happens to be Democratic. I think it is about time that we faced the problem and realized that these Government employes are just as honest and just as efficient and just as industrious as are other employes in or out of Government. They have made a career of their service, and many of them work 8 and 10 hours a day. It's about time we gave them credit for the job they have done."

REPORT: The Senate House conference report on the State, Justice and Commerce appropriation bill provides:

Funds to hire several hundred border patrolmen for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

No funds for State's Inter-American Economic and Social Council.

A slight increase for Justice's tax division.

An appropriation of $5,100,000 for Census to collect current statistics that will force a staff reshuffling and shake-down in that agency. However, the House rider was killed that would have forced Census to transfer its foreign trade statistical work to Commerce's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The Patent Office was given funds to inaugurate a promotion system for its examiners, and the funds were provided to continue the hiring of criers for Federal judges.

Winter Jury Let 'Small' Gamblers Go

One Member Says The Feeling Was 'Top Boys' Deserved Prosecution First

Many alleged small-time Washington numbers writers escaped indictment last winter because a District grand jury felt the "top boys" should be prosecuted first.

This was revealed yesterday by a member of the grand jury which sat betwen January and the end of March.

"A good many members of the jury felt that many of the numbers cases presented were picayunish things that didn't amount to much," the juryman said.

He said the failure to bring big gamblers before the jury was "not the fault of the United States attorney (George Morris Fay) or his deputies." He said many jurymen felt it was the failing of law-enforcement agencies. He declared Fay and his assistants pressed hard for indictments on the lesser gambling figures and were noticeably disappointed that more were not indicted.

The juryman's statement supported the stand taken by Fay Saturday night when Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett suddenly issued a detailed, seven-page report on past grand jury actions on gambling cases.

The report, covering the period from June 30, 1947, to May 17, 1948, was released without explanation.

Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel, who was assigned to study gambling cases sent before the grand jury, yesterday refused to comment on whether he had authored the report, what the purpose of it was and whether he had completed his assignment.

The statistics gathered by the police showed a sharp increase in gambling indictments returned by the regular grand jury since April, as compared to the preceding nine months. This was construed as an attempt by the police to "needle" Fay and imply that his office can obtain indictments when it wants to.

When Fay was informed of the report Saturday he declared that he had gone before the grand juries sitting in March and April and unsuccessfully sought indictments. The juries were unwilling to indict the small operators while the big gamblers were still at large, he said.

A five-page breakdown in the police report shows that sentences imposed on persons found guilty of gambling charges indicated gamblers stand to lose little, even if convicted. Heaviest fines were $500 and $300. The most popular sentence, recurring in some 29 cases, appeared to be a fine of $50 as an alternative to 60 days in jail. The most severe jail sentence was for one year, imposed in two cases. Lightest jail sentence was for 20 to 60 days. Straight jail sentences were imposed in only eight cases, the breakdown showed.

The special grand jury, which since May 18 has been investigating an alleged 100-million-dollar-a-year District gambling racket, adjourned last week and is expected to resume its probe after the holiday weekend.

Plasterer Held On Rape Charge

A 26-year-old plasterer yesterday was charged with the rape of a 30-year-old woman in his basement apartment Saturday night.

Police identified him as George M. Brown of 1312 Corbin pl. ne. He was held without bond for his appearance today in Municipal Court.

Police said Brown persuaded the woman to accompany him to his apartment, where they had relations. The woman was said to be mentally retarded and her family became worried when she had not returned home after leaving for the store some time before.

And Not a Cent to Buy 'Em

Fairfax Has So Many Children It Needs Six More Schools

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Fairfax County, like the "old woman who lived in a shoe," has so many children it doesn't know what to do.

Its children, multiplied by the crop of war babies and an unprecedented expansion in home construction, are spilling out of regular classrooms into makeshifts.

The problem, while not peculiar to Fairfax, is unusually acute in this county which fast is becoming a part of suburban Washington.

The county has not a cent of money for new schools beyond what is now in the construction stage.

"We have no money and we do not forsee when we will have any," Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson declared.

Plea to Tuck Planned

To find a solution a group of parent-teacher association and civic leaders from the Falls Church area are forming a county-wide committee to petition Governor William M. Tuck to grant emergency relief or to call a special session of the General Assembly to vote funds.

Superintendent Woodson estimates that to house elementary students adequately in September he needs 60 classrooms or the equivalent of six new schools.

This is in addition to the 23 classrooms that new construction will add this fall.

Beyond emergency relief the committee is advocating a long-term program financed by a sales tax "to prevent the recurrence of the present grave situation."

"We do not like a sales tax," said committee member Omer L. Hirst of Annandale, Va., "but we are desperate for new schools."

Members of Committee

Other members of the committee are Mrs. E. A. Salzman, retiring president of the Falls Church P-TA; Harold A. Ward, former president of the Fairfax County Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Harold W. Hodges Falls Church P-TA executive committee; Dr. John R. Miles, new P-TA president and director of research for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce division on education; LaRue Van Meter, Falls Church town attorney, and Mrs. Mark Regan, president of the Fairfax County P-TA federation.

In the event a State-wide sales tax is turned down by the General Assembly, the committee urges that it grant permission for the county to impose its own sales tax for schools.

Woodson said his schools with a capacity of 10,000 now house 12,000 students. It is his conservative estimate that enrollment will swell an additional thousand next year.

Actually, enrollment may be a great deal more. Almost overnight, fields are turned into apartment developments or into rows of new homes. Residents primarily are recently married veterans and young couples with families.

Population Doubles

Since 1940 the county population has grown from 40,929 to an estimated 100,000 residents, and school enrollment from 6786 to 11,697 students.

If population increases at the present rate, 14,000 children will be in Fairfax County schools by 1949-50 and if home-building accelerates the number may reach 20,000, the committee estimates.

The committee and Superintendent Woodson agree that 4 million dollars worth of construction is needed right now. An additional 3 million dollars will be needed by 1950 and another million by 1952.

What will Fairfax County do with its children in September?

"We will house them in whatever buildings we can find," Woodson said, "in churches, in halls and in firehouses. Some schools will go part-time."

Typical Problem

One of the schools that can expect half day schooling is the Madison School in Falls Church.

Enrollment is now 1187 students in a school with a capacity of 450. A nearby abandoned high school—the Jefferson—is used as an annex to house 338 of the students. The remainder are assigned to temporary buildings and quonset huts in the school yard.

The outside buildings are heated by pot-bellied stoves and have no running water. The more than 850 students must use the 16 toilets and 6 wash basins of the main building.

Another school that probably will go on part-time is the elementary school at Lincolnia. Three hundred and forty-seven students now are crowded in a school built for 275. Classes are held in the library and on the stage of the auditorium where all lighting is artificial and where there is no direct ventilation.

Three classes currently are meeting in the auditorium of the Annandale Elementary School and at the Groveton school a class meets in a storeroom 8 feet wide and 22 feet long.

Two Killed, Score Hurt In Traffic

Girl, 18, Fatally Injured in Crash On Curve About Mile From Woodbridge

Two persons were killed in separate tarffic accidents on Virginia highways yesterday and nearly a score others were injured in District area crashes.

Killed in Virginia were Marylin Kaufman, 18, of Warsaw, Ind., and Robert Roosevelt Ashbaugh, 43, of Harpers Ferry, W. Va.

Miss Kaufman was killed and six others injured when two cars collided on Wigglesworth curve, about 1 mile from Woodbridge, Va., on Route 1. The body was removed to Hall's funeral home at Occoquan, Va.

Seven Hurt in Crash

Also on Route 1, near Woodbridge, in another wreck, seven other persons were injured last night when their car skidded and turned end over end down a 40-foot embankment.

The injured, according to State police: Miss Elizabeth Cook, 19, of Washington; Miss Margaret Arbuckle, 18, of Danville; Miss Patricia Radcliffe, 17, of Aberdeen, Md.; Miss Emily Doris Smith, 24, of Danville, and Miss Ruby Ricketts, 18, of Danville, all Mary Washington College students, and Calvin Greer Cleary, 23, of Danville, and Wynford Cleary, 19, of Danville.

Three Washingtonians were injured in a two-car collision near Mount Harmony, Md., but a woman and a baby in one of the cars escaped unharmed.

Admitted to Calvert County Hospital, according to Associated Press, were James E. Dillon, 48, of 818 8th st. ne., suffering chest injuries and lacerations; Leroy E. Harris, 32, of 1110 South Carolina ave. ne., lacerations of face, chest and arms; and Stanley Milosky, 23, of 1312 E. Capitol st., lacerations of face and right leg.

State police said Dillon's car collided with one driven by Cecil D. Tinsman, 38, of Arlington, Va.

Harris and his wife and baby were passengers in the car with Dillon.

Ashbaugh was killed and his sister, Mrs. Haddie Weddle, 48, of Legore, Md., critically hurt, when a jeep went over a 14-foot bank just east of the West Virginia line on Route 9.

War Widow Is Valedictorian at Law School

An attractive 31-year-old war widow, who mixed baby formulas between probing law books, will graduate Friday as valedictorian of the 1948 class of National University's School of Law.

The seventy-ninth annual exercises, set for 1:15 p. m. in the Central High School auditorium, will find Mrs. Ellen Lee Park seated on the platform with eminent judicial figures and other prominent guests. She will be the only member of the student body so honored.

Laurels have come before to the young law student-mother.

Chief Justice George P. Barse of Municipal Court, Chancellor of the Law School, told about that yesterday.

When First Lieut. Houston S. Park, jr., former District Court clerk here, fell on Saipan in 1944, Judge Barse related, his wife and infant son faced a dismal future. Undaunted, Mrs. Park, a graduate of Sweet Briar College, decided to change that bleak outlook.

In September, 1944, three months after her husband's death, Mrs. Park won a four-year scholarship in law from the National University chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, legal sorority. By last year, when she was a junior, she had won more prizes than any other undergraduate.

Immediate project for Mrs. Park of 2909 33d pl. nw., is studying to pass those law exams—due later this month. And after that, law practice.

Law School Senior, Ex-Army Captain, Called Despondent

A 29-year-old Georgetown University student, about to be graduated from the law school, jumped nine stories to his death early yesterday at the Governor Shepherd Apartments, 2121 Virginia ave. nw.

He was Thomas Murphy, a roomer at 3307 Fessenden st. nw., formerly of Rochester, N. Y., and a captain in Army Medical Corps administration during the war.

Police said Murphy went to the roof of the building at about 1:30 a. m. and, despite the efforts of a friend, leaped from the parapet. He landed on his feet about 4 feet below on another projecting roof and jumped again from there.

Murphy was at a gathering in the apartment of John Henderson and Hubert Merrick in the building, police said. Friends told police Murphy had been to another party earlier and was drinking.

Despondent During Party

The officers said they were told Murphy grew despondent during the Governor Shepherd party, complaining that he was a "failure." Merrick accompanied him to the roof, they said, where Murphy again voiced despair before jumping.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified the death as suicide after Murphy was pronounced dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Murphy of Rochester, were notified of the death.

Mrs. B. Basch, Murphy's landlady for the last eight months, described Murphy as quiet, respectable and "always happy as a lark." She said he left the house about noon Saturday.

Classmates said Murphy attended an end-term cocktail party given by a faculty member, Nicholas Chase, for his students before going to the apartment of Henderson and Merrick. All said he appeared normal, his usual quiet self.

Completed Final Exams

Murphy completed his final examinations in recent weeks and was planning to take a bar examination, said Jack Maher, a fellow student, of 3502 Valley dr., Alexandria. Like other seniors, he was awaiting the results, which are announced in June just before graduation.

Maher, who knew Murphy intimately, said Murphy "had no trouble" in his courses, adding it was not likely Murphy knew or expected he would be barred from graduating because of failure.

Murphy entered the Georgetown Law School in 1946 and was completing the special accelerated course under the GI Bill of Rights. Friends said they understood he was graduated from a Canadian college and served during the war in India.

Flag Upside Down At Stevens School

The Washington Post

DISTRESS?—The flag at Stevens School, 1000 block of 21st st. nw., is shown flying upside down at half mast yesterday. Regulations call for the flag to be flown at half mast on Memorial Day, but when the colors fly upside down, it is signal of distress. A reporter could find no distress, however

2 Firemen Injured at Store Blaze

Two firemen were injured yesterday morning while fighting a two-alarm blaze in George's Radio Co., 816 F st. nw.

The fire apparently started from a defective electric appliance on the second floor, burning down into the first floor and destroying an undetermined amount of merchadise, police said.

Two alarms were turned in because the store is in the downtown shopping area and firemen feared it would spread.

Pvt. H. L. Swaney, attached to No. 6 Engine Company, received a cut on the leg which required five stitches. He was treated at Emergency Hospital and later ordered on sick leave. Pvt. B. Wallerstein, attached to Rescue Squad No. 1, was treated at the scene for burns to his ears and a cut on his left hand.

Oversubscription Of Hospital Fund Urged by Rector

The Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, rector of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, yesterday called upon the people of that community to oversubscribe the $200,000 fund drive for Alexandria Hospital.

The emergency fund drive, he said, is the way in which residents of Alexandria can be assured of the staff, services and equipment which may mean the difference between life and death.

"We cannot afford to become involved and confused by a lot of hair splitting about private and public welfare," he asserted, urging support from every source for the hospital's work.

Area News in Brief

2 Boys, 2 Girls Held In Club Auto Theft

Because the driver didn't know how to shift the gears, two Virginia boys and two girls were arrested yesterday in connection with theft of an automoblie from the Army and Navy Country Club.

Prince Georges County Policemen Horace King and William Wiseman saw the four, all 18 years old, in a 1947 Buick in Mount Rainier, near the District line, shortly before 3 a. m.

When the driver finally succeeded in shifting the gears, the car started off at high speed, the policemen reported. They caught the car at 38th st. and Rhode Island ave., where one of the youths leaped out and ran. He was arrested a short time later by Washington police when he tried to hide behind a tree just over the District line.

The four gave their names and were charged as follows: James R. Holmes of Arlington, Va., who, police said, jumped from the car, unauthorized use of an auto, $1000 bond; Alfred Coleman, Alexandria, Va., assisting in the authorized use of an automobile, speeding in excess of 30 miles an hour, and no permit, $1200 bond; Sarah Campbell and Evelyn Scott, both of Alexandria, assisting in unauthorized use, $1000 bond each.

The four are scheduled to appear Thursday for hearing in Hyattsville Police Court. They were being held in Hyattsville lockup last night pending bond.

Prince Georges County police said Virginia police are expected to prefer further charges today, since the club from which the car was stolen is located in Arlington.

Reporter Makes News

Jean Reiff, police reporter for The Washington Post, not only reported the news yesterday, but helped make a bit of it.

Returning to the Municipal Center press room from her rounds, she saw a man going down the hall with a raincoat belonging to a fellow reporter, Gilbert Violante, of the Times-Herald.

Hurriedly, she called members of the police robbery squad, and a few minutes later the man was arrested by Detective Richard Mowrer as he attempted to leave the building.

Violante identified his coat by a cheese sandwich and chocolate cookies in the pockets. The man who gave his age as 53, was held for questioning.

Chef Burned at Oven

Aschill Henderson, 42, of 811 E st. se., a chef at the Capitol Cafe, 8th and E sts. se., was burned in a flash fire from an oven at the cafe yesterday morning. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital, suffering second-degree burns of the face, neck and arms.

Boy-Hero Wins Award

An 11-year-old boy who twice within a year saved other children from injury by automobiles will receive the regional Popsicle Youth Award at a luncheon Thursday.

The boy, Joseph Fisher, 707 Somerset pl. nw., will be presented a United States Savings bond, a gold medal and a citation by Bob Feller, the baseball pitcher, at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler. Bill Herson of Radio Station WRC will be master of ceremonies.

Last October Joseph, a Whittier Elementary School patrol boy, pulled a schoolmate from the path of an automobile. In April he did it again when a high school student backing his car into an intersection failed to see a kindergartener.

Big Turtle AWOL

A snapping turtle, the second in the past 10 days, wandered up the 2200 block of California ave. nw. yesterday, right into the clutches of captivity.

The turtle, weighing about 15 pounds and measuring about 1 foot across, turned up on the lawn of the William Penn Apartments, 2231 Calfiornia ave. nw.

Mrs. Virginia Anderson, the manager, said she picked up the snapper, put it in the basement, and plans to send it soon to the country.

Where the turtle came from remains a mystery.

Floor Wax Explodes

Two adults and a 4-year-old boy were treated for minor burns at Georgetown Hospital yesterday after a can of floor wax was being warmed on a stove and exploded in the kitchen of a house at 4540 Butterworth pl. nw.

They are Mrs. Freda Berger, 41, of 1411 Saratoga ave. ne.; her son, Michael, and Chanel Wyche, 28, a carpenter, 5127 Lee st. ne. Mrs. Berger's sister, Miss Sharon Green, 21, of the Saratoga ave. address, had her hair and eyebrows singed by the blast, which also damaged the kitchen walls.

The Bergers and Miss Green were at the house to make arrangements to move in on Thursday. Carl Austin, 22, 519 Florida ave. nw., employed by them to clean the house, said he placed the wax on the stove to soften it and was cleaning on the third floor when the explosion occurred.

Hyattsville's Needs To Be Discussed

Revised plans for a survey of Hyattsville's needs will be discussed at a meeting of the Hyattsville Planning Committee Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the County Service Building in Hyattsville.

Miss Mitford, Hitler Friend, 33, Succumbs

Oban, Scotland, May 30 (AP).—Unity Freeman-Mitford, 33, center of a storm of speculation at the beginning of the war because of her friendship with Adolf Hitler, died last night. She was the daughter of Baron Redesdale.

A friend of the family said her death was believed to have been caused by meningitis.

In Germany, near Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat at the beginning of the war, she was seriously wounded by a pistol shot in the head under circumstances never publicly explained.

She was unconscious three weeks. Top German physicians attended her, and on Christmas Eve, 1939, an ambulance train took her to a French channel port and the British government allowed her to join her family. In England she recovered speedily.

Her English friends said it was an accident. In Germany it was known that she had seen Hitler on several occasions in those tense days and she had been a guest at his retreat in the Bavarian Alps.

Miss Freeman-Mitford first went to Germany in 1935 to attend a Nazi summer festival. She was accompanied by her sister, Diana, who later married Sir Oswald Mosley, prewar British Fascist leader. She praised the Reichschancellor and he spoke of her as an "ideal Nordic type."

She met and apparently won the approval of other top-ranking Nazis. An exception was Rudolph Hess, deputy fuehrer, who was reported to have remarked that he hoped "someone would throw her out."

Phyllis Hoyland Chosen to Sing National Anthem at Convention

THERE'S one proud congressional secretary in Representative George H. Fallon's office. And there's every reason why Mrs. Frances Burns Hoyland is beaming with motherly joy. Her daughter, 18 years old, Miss Phyllis Hoyland, has been elected to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

Joyce's appearance will mark one of the rare, if not the only occasion, on which a singer who has not already achieved Nation-wide acclaim has sung before the convention.

The youthful Baltimore soprano is a student of Romano Raomani, who coached Rosa Ponselle to success. Although she has trained for operatic work little more than two years, she recently gave a recital before a large audience in Constitution Hall. Last year she sang for Mrs. Truman at a garden party, and a few weeks ago she sang a group of songs at a Siamese Embassy dinner party.

Miss Hoyland sang with the Baltimore Symphony under the direction of Reginald Stewart. She was the grand prize winner of the National Chamber Music Guild auditions.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Believing She Has Great Gifts as Actress, Young Wife Wants to Pursue Her 'Art' With Single Mind, But Devoted Husband Dissents

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I can appreciate that the circumstances I am about to relate wouldn't affect an ordinary person, but I am sure you understand that there are those who are blessed with special gifts, and I am lucky enough to have a great gift for the stage, so please consider my story in a different light.

Everyone says I have exceptional talent, and I feel if one has talent it is important that it not be concealed. Talent should be developed; one should be true to one's self.

As to my background, I have done professional stage work since the age of six years. My parents are well-to-do and have always encouraged me. I am a college graduate and now I am married to a wonderful man and have a darling little son. But my one real ambition and desire in life is to continue also with my stage work.

Husband Has Made Many Concessions

MY HUSBAND is an investment broker, a good provider, exceptionally intelligent and very easy to get along with. He agrees to my doing "little theater" work and will even stay home evenings to take care of our son. Also, he is very sympathetic to my need of extra rest due to the added strain, and even brings me breakfast in bed. But he doesn't want me to go on with my art really seriously.

He feels I ought to be satisfied with the little theater work, which I feel is only a stepping stone to greater things. I have had an offer which is just what I've been wanting. It would help my career a great deal. However, it would necessitate my being away from home several weeks at a time and my husband opposes this. I feel unjustly. We have decided to go by your decision.

Please understand I am not just a stage-struck kid. Much as I love Greg and our son, this is really the most important thing in my life. Please answer soon. E. D.

Has Neither Genius Nor Authentic Talent

DEAR E. D.: "Genius is skyborn and will arise," someone has truly said. Denied the idyllic grand avenue of expression, it will flower significantly in compensatory form in any circumstance, to dawn on those who have eyes to see and the esthetic sense to appreciate original creative artistry, even though it may pass unnoticed by the larger world.

Now, about you. The net impression conveyed by your story persuades me that you have neither genius nor even much authentic talent for the stage. Rather I think you are the inordinately narcissistic product of parents who, influenced by their residential proximity to Hollywood, drilled into you from an early age the unconscious Ego Ideal of becoming a "famous" actress.

The fact that you have done stage work since the age of six, i. e., for some 20 years past, under their well-to-do auspices, and are still an "unknown" in the novice class, with only a claque following of personal friends (which is the picture I get), suggests that you are, and always have been, on the wrong track in straining to be an actress.

Her False Striving Cloaks Infantilism

IN MY OPINION, one of the most illuminating phrases in your letter is the remark, "I feel if one has talent it is important that it not be concealed." I think the key word here is "concealed." I think your "real ambition and desire in life" is public attention and adulation; and as for being "true to yourself," I think you mean letting nothing interfere with your consistent practise of self-worship.

Alas for the marriage, you have no real tenderness to give the wonderful husband, the darling child; and this explains your immediate urge to grab an offer that would take you away from home for weeks at a time. It is a typical infantile neurotic attempt to put a fancy false face on serious failure in personal relationship.

For the rest, a wife and mother, whose family doesn't need financial help from her, is entitled to function as a professional careerist also, only if she has the abounding vitality—hallmark of creative elan—to do justice by all three jobs.

This I gather you haven't got, as witness the fact that a bit of "little theater" dabbling regularly knocks you out the morning after, which certainly puts you in the dilettante category. It suggests that what you really need is psychiatric help to bring you emotionally of age, hence able and willing to succeed, first of all, in the wife-mother role you've already wangled. M. H.

Strawberry Recipe Is Favorite With Southern Cooks

Here's a recipe for strawberry preserves that's a great favorite in some sections of the South. The short cooking period and the fact that it is made in small batches are said to be the secrets of its deliciousness.

Strawberry Preserves
1 quart berries
3 cups sugar

Put 1½ cups of sugar with the capped and washed fruit and boil 5 minutes. Add remaining sugar and boil 10 to 15 minutes. A watery fruit must be cooked longer.

Turn into an earthenware jar and let stand 24 hours. Stir occasionally. Seal cold in sterlized jars.

MADE OF OLD FILING CABINETS decorated with tin cans are the chests in this view of the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joel. Mrs. Joel, seated on the couch, figures that it cost only $30 to buy five cabinets, paint, upholstery material, dye, lamp fittings and two second-hand chairs used in giving the room a new look

Amateur Craftsman Builds New Look Furniture for Home

By Lucia Brown

"Take five old filing cabinets, a pile of tin cans, and a few buckets of paint . . ."

Doesn't sound like a very promising recipe for refurnishing a living room, does it? But it's the one Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joel followed in bringing a smart, new look to their apartment at 1625 Franklin st. ne.

"The neighbors all thought we were crazy when we started buying surplus filing cabinets from the War Assets Administration," laughs Mrs. Joel. "I'm sure they were convinced when we moved in seven of them!"

The Joels wasted no time in getting to work on their purchases, however, and it wasn't long before they had proved the cases were good for other things besides filing away OPA regulations or quartermaster's bills of sale. All but two of the cabinets (cost, $2 apiece) have now been made into useful and highly decorative pieces for the Joel living room.

Old Tin Cans

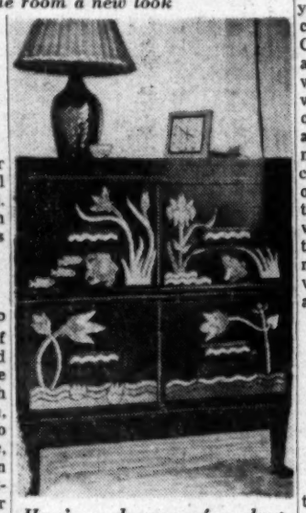
Mr. Joel, a petroleum specialist, had made a radio cabinet once but considered himself a rank amateur at the wood-working business when he set to work with saw and hammer on the cabinets. He had some definite and original ideas, though, about decorating the pieces to cover up holes left by removing drawers pulls, card holders, and locks. These ideas involved tin cans of all kinds and shades, including silvery white tomato cans, reddish metal beers cans, coppery can for corn, and others.

First, though, Mr. Joel altered the cabinets a bit. He combined the legs and top of one to make an unusual coffee table, with a hinged top and a space inside where decks of cards and other games can be stored. A square 4-drawer cabinet (2 drawers above 2 drawers) he made into a large chest. A 2-drawer cabinet formed a low table to go at one end of studio couch. These were all painted with several coats of black enamel.

Then, taking the tin cans and a pair of metal snips, Mr. Joel cut out pieces to make fish, frogs birds, flowers, and lizards and fastened them with small nails in interesting designs on the front of the chests and the top of the coffee table. He blended the vari-colored metals cleverly to make shaded figures and flowers and interesting contrast. Next step was to cover the cabinets—decorations and all—with five coats of floor varnish. Each one was rubbed down with steel wool so that the furniture has a smooth, fine finish.

Bottles Make Lamps

The other cabinets were used to make a long low arrangements of shelves and drawers across one end of the living room. These were painted chartreuse, to fit in with room's color scheme of dark green, chartreuse, black and gold. To go with the file cabinet furniture, Mrs. Joe covered sofa cushions in chartreuse and upholstered a footstool in the same color. The cover for the studio couch was dyed a deep green. She made new lamps of bottles and jars. Two chairs, bought at a second hand store, were painted black with touches of gold. All told, the Joels spent only $30 for the cabinets, chairs and all materials—and wound up with new furniture, new lamps, and an entirely new look for their living room.



Here's a close-up of a chest made by Michael Joel from a square filing cabinet bought from the War Assets Administration. Pieces cut from old tin cans of various shades of metal were used by Mr. Joel in making the designs on the front of the chest, which is painted black

Expectant Mothers' Hospital Needs

About five months ago, you published a list of suggested articles for the expectant mother to take to the hospital. I have misplaced my list. Would you print it again? B. R. W.

The answer you wish appeared in the December 25, 1947 issue of The Washington Post and is as follows:

Cosmetics, extra clothing, and sundry miscellaneous items will make your stay in the hospital more comfortable, but don't try to take too much. Unless you have a private nurse, you will be able to use only those things that can be kept in your bedside cabinet within your reach. Don't take valuable jewelry. Hospitals prefer not to be responsible for it. As far as nightgowns go, long ones are a nuisance when you're sick in bed. Hospital coats may not have glamour, but they are comfortable and convenient in bed. Most bed jackets are too brief to wear without something under them, but short nightgowns and pajama tops are most practical. The negligee or robe you take should be preferably of some wrinkle-resistant fabric, such as terry cloth, cotton crepe, seersucker, brushed rayon, silk jersey, or lightweight wool. Hospitals are usually very warm, so it need not be heavy. Be sure it is easy to get on and off. Bed room slippers should be comfortable and secure—no teetery heels or floppy mules. Cosmetics and toilet articles for your hair should include brush and comb, bobby pins, barettes, nets, snoods or ribbons to match your gowns or jackets. Take along your regular make-up items to care for your face and hands. Carry along manicure equipment and nail polish if you think you will use them. You will, of course want a tooth brush, and powder or paste, as well as a deodorant and toilet water or perfume. You might also take along these miscellaneous conveniences: A clock or watch, stationery, stamps, fountain pen or pencil, address book for writing birth announcements or thank-you notes, the announcements themselves (if you plan to write them), a light-hearted book and some current magazines.

Is there a preparation on the market which I can put over sterling pieces after polishing so that they won't tarnish? I have several pieces I like to use for "show" but dislike having them tarnish quickly. M. M.

There are several such preparations, including clear lacquer, plastic solutions, and products that both clean silver and retard tarnish. Inquire about them in the houseware's sections of the department stores. The lacquer and plastic preparations are often available in paint stores, too.

Is there a good book on general house cleaning on the market? If there are several, which is the best? I have in mind something quite exhaustive which would list all parts of a house which need cleaning and when. For example, how often do you change shelf paper, wash windows, wash Venetian blinds, dust same, have rugs cleaned, wax floors, etc.? B. C. R.

A favorite book of mine on this subject is "America's Housekeeping Book," compiled by the New York Herald Tribune Home Institute, and published by Scribner's. Another good one is "The Good Housekeeping Book," published by McKay. Considerably less expensive (available for 5c from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.) is "House Cleaning Management and Methods," Farmers Bulletin No. 1834, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Since the need for washing windows, Venetian blinds, etc., is so dependent on the amount of dirt in the air in your locality and the usage they receive, it's doubtful whether any of these books will tell you exactly how often to do these jobs. However, they contain many general and specific suggestions along these lines, as well as much other information of interest and help to the homemaker.

How can tomato juice stain be removed from my baby's bibs and dresses? E. J. R.

Work glycerine into the stains and let stand for a half-hour. Wash thoroughly with soap and water. If this does not completely remove the stain, sponge the area with hydrogen peroxide and rinse with cold water. Hydrogen peroxide is a bleach, so test its effect on an inconspicuous spot if the dresses or bibs are colored.

PETUNIA!

My Angel Food Cakes
Are delectable—but
Heavens to Betsy,
They're awful to cut!

Try using a silk thread to cut Angel Food or Sponge Cakes, Petunia! It's easy—and it won't mash the cake.

Bishop-Bracken

How can I remove rust stains from a white linen sampler cross-stitched in black? The rust has been in the material a long time and the sampler has never been laundered. A. F. M.

A rust-removing soap is sold by one of the large chain drugstore companies here. It comes in tubes and the material must be wet before it is used. It affects some colors but not others. It would therefore be wise to test with water and remover on an obscure edge of the sampler, or pull out a black thread and test this, before using it in a more prominent place. Washing the entire sampler will not be necessary as the remover can be used on a "spotting" basis.

Tantrums Are Expression of Child's Woes

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When a child feels helpless and frustrated by circumstances, or by people, he resorts to a temper tantrum. What other course has he? It is second nature for parents to want to dominate children and mold them to their own standards. They use every method to achieve their purposes. They talk, argue, use force or punishment. When the child, whose desires to act in his own way are often as strong as the parent's, finds himself in a helpless net of coercion, he flies into a rage and screams and kicks.

When a mother knows what foments a temper tantrum it seems pretty foolish for her to use as her only weapon the policy of ignoring the tantrum. A child who feels deeply about the injustice of not being able to act as he feels it is right for him to act, is not going to stop screaming because no one notices him. Besides, someone always notices him. Even if his parents walk out on him, whatever their pretensions, because it is an "act."

Temper tantrums are sometimes violent symptoms of wrong parental treatment. The first thing that is essential for parents to ask themselves is what they are doing that makes it necessary for the child to resort to such behavior to get notice.

Temper tantrums are prevalent during the ages from 18 months to three years. This is the time when the child is becoming aware of his own desires and his powerful need to have them fulfilled. No one argues that a child is to be allowed to do everything he wants to do, just because he wants it. That would not even be pleasing to the child, as he finds security in guidance. But, it is also true that unless he has some opportunity to act the way he wants to act, he is going to be against everything the parents want him to do. His life must be a balance of things he can do and things he can't do. Then he becomes respectful of guidance and discipline.

It is only when it is completely one-sided and only the parents' wishes are being fulfilled, that he is driven to dramatically, emotional behavior to advertise his woes. It is a wise parent who will call a halt and ask herself how she can improve her own behavior. She can then expect to improve the child's.

A Pleasing Atmosphere

If you do not care for the pungent odor of incense to take away any cooking odors just previous to your party, fill a small bowl with boiling water and drop a few drops of lavender oil into it. Place this in the dining or living room for a few minutes before the guests arrive. It will create a most pleasant aroma.

Church Battle Against Reds Held 'Mortal'

Atlanta, May 30 (AP).—The conflict between communism and Christianity will be mortal and decisive, a former Army colonel told the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (South) today.

Roy LeCraw, former Mayor of Atlanta, who served in Europe in World War II, said Communists are "white hot" in their ideology, ready and willing to die for it.

Too many Americans, he said, are "hardly willing to live for their beliefs."

LeCraw is directing a campaign for the church to double its membership in the next five years and raise more than seven million dollars, a large part of which will be used for foreign missionary work. He told the assembly:

"We sit back here in smug security when everybody knows that whether this church stands will be decided in China, Japan and other places.

"The churches have been so careful in the past to remove fanaticism that they have removed the fire."

He urged ministers to cease asking members to do "two-bit" jobs and ask them to give half their time to church causes.

"Ask your big men to give $25,000—not chicken feed. Ask your members to tithe. Their hearts will be with their money—men will do tremendous things to save a world."

500 Attend Forum on Americanism

More than 500 persons last night attended a forum on Americanism sponsored by District Grand Lodge No. 5, B'nai B'rith, in the Hotel Statler.

Speaking at the organization's seventy-second convention program were Dr. Merrill F. Hartshorn, executive secretary, National Council for Social Studies; Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, and Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, president of the State Teachers College, Towson, Md.

A fourth speaker, Harold Russell, star of the motion picture, "Best Years of Our Lives," described his experiences as a handicapped war veteran in relation to Americanism.

World citizenship is the newest field in education for citizenship, Hartshorn said, adding that he wanted to "emphasize that there is no conflict between being a good citizen of the local community, the United States and the world."

Studebaker said the obligation of citizenship "is becoming increasingly difficult as the political, social and economic issues of the day become ever more complicated," and said "we are expecting the impossible if we think that anything less than 12 or 14 years of formal schooling" can lay the foundation for the responsibility of citizenship.

Hawkins said the three basic things needed are "people who know, people who care, and people who do something."

Business sessions of the convention, which began Saturday night, will be resumed at 10 a. m. today. New candidates will be inducted at an 8:30 p. m. program at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., followed by a dance at 10 p. m. The convention will end Tuesday.

Exhibition Of Displays Due Thursday

More than 350 displays made by children in 154 of the District's public and parochial schools will be shown as part of the Junior Community Improvement Project Exhibition, Thursday through Saturday, at the National Guard Armory, 2001 East Capitol st.

The exhibition, which has a general theme, "Washington of Tomorrow," is approved by the District Board of Education and is held in cooperation with the City Planning Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, Dr. Herbert M. Corning, superintendent of schools, said yesterday.

Opening at 3:30 p. m. Thursday, and at 2 p. m. Friday and Saturday, the exhibition will close each evening at 9 p. m. Admission is free.

Awards for the displays will be given on a basis of excellent, good and honorable mention to exhibits from elementary, junior and senior high schools. Judges will make their selections before the exhibit opens.

Bill Wants Reform In Telephone Manners

It's doubtful whether any modern invention has given rise to such a widespread display of bad manners as the telephone.

For example, there's the guy who has called the wrong number, because he was too lazy to look up the right one.

He wants to talk to Joe, and no amount of courteous explanation will convince him that you're not refusing to bring Joe to the phone for sinister reasons of your own. It never occurs to this type of caller that he owes you an apology. He just bangs the phone up in your ear.

Just as annoying is the switchboard operator who, in a dim, muffled voice answers your ring with:

"Gmorninglmphnfumph."

After you ask for your party, you find out whether or not you got the right switchboard. If she connects you, it's safe to assume you dialed correctly.

Another type of operator without whom I could learn to live is the girl who takes your request for Mr. Jones, cheerfully says, "Mr. Jones? Thank you," and then vanishes from your life forever.

She's related to the kind of person who says, "Wait a second—I'll call him to the phone." In my time I have stuck these waits out to the bitter end, and am in a position to report that they are usually terminated 5 or 10 minutes later when a strange voice is heard to inquire:

"Hey, who left this receiver off the hook? Is somebody on this phone?"

On these occasions I admit defeat as gracefully as possible, put the phone aside, and write the man a letter.

TWIN BILL

David B. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw. notes that the Atlas Theater recently offered the double feature:

"Bill and Coo." "Under California Stars."

MISCELLANY

The new American Airlines Convair Flagships will help to correct the baggage snafu at National Airport. Passengers who want to bypass the baggage room bottleneck will be able to use the self-service luggage racks on the new ships . . . The Sherwood Presbyterian Church A Capella Choir will give its spring concert this Friday (8 p. m., Sherwood Church Hall, 22nd and Jackson sts. ne.), and, while there won't be any admission charge, I'm assured by Mrs. Thomas S. Lawson of 2845 Brentwood rd. ne., that "anybody who wants to make a voluntary offering for the benefit of the choir music fund will find no obstacles placed in his path" . . . Speaking of airlines, as we were a moment ago, Tom Bell of TWA tells me that four shipments of dogs arrived from Paris recently, minus the waybills which should have been attached to their crates. The disappearance of waybills makes airline personnel very unhappy, so an investigation was launched. It eventually disclosed that the dogs had eaten the waybills, en route . . . Walter Harris of the Fredericksburg (Va.) Business Men's Luncheon Club writes: "By all means make plans to attend our annual Fredericksburg Day celebration, to be held on July 14 at Colonial Beach. I'm sure you won't want to miss seeing 30 or more of the city's lovliest girls vie for honors in our beauty contest." Er—I'm sure I—um—wouldn't, Walter, but—ah—under the circumstances we'd better wait until I get permission—that is, discuss this matter more fully at home. Not that I'm not boss, you understand; it's just that I don't know yet whether I'm interested in beauty contests. I'll let you know as soon as I am told—I mean, as soon as I decide.

FILLING THE VOID

Here's further proof that Attorney General Clark's campaign against juvenile delinquency is not restricted to athletics.

John A. Remon of the Police Boys Club tells me that the boys are conducting a five-point program in cooperation with the Attorney General, and only one of the five points has to do with athletics. The other four are:

1. Educational: Lectures, debates, quiz programs, supervised tours, home work and library training.

2. Crafts: Model boats and planes, wood and metal working, linoleum printing and mask making.

3. Social: Plays, pet shows, bands and orchestras, community sings, parties, etc.

4. Recreation: Bowling, horseshoes, table games, darts and many others.

So it's quite obvious that the youngsters are being encouraged to participate in a great variety of activities.

The pity of it is that only the sports writers have been doing a real job of publicizing this vital program. A class in wood working isn't as exciting as a golf match, so it doesn't break into print.

JIMMY ISN'T COUNTING HIS CHICKENS YET

Mrs. Dorothy McCoy of 2037 N. Underwood st., Falls Church, Va., was talking to her 5-year-old neighbor, Jimmy Tinkham, the other day.

Subject of the conversation was Jimmy's sister, who had been sent home from school when she became ill.

"What's wrong with your sister?" asked Mrs. McCoy. "Is it chicken pox?"

"That's what they think it is," replied Jimmy, "but they're not sure. She hasn't had any chickens yet."

BY THE WAY—

Have you noticed that the hack inspector is now acknowledging safe driving records of our local cab drivers?

Each hacker must post his license in a conspicuous place in the cab. (The drivers call it "my face," because it includes a picture of the licensee).

On the lower right hand corner of the license the hack inspector is now stamping a figure "1" for all drivers who have completed one full year of operation without an accident.

As the years roll by, the figures will be changed to conform with ever-lengthening safety records—which, to my mind, is a slick stunt to promote traffic safety.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Jim Butler of Editor and Publisher notes that a recent Washington Post story said that Branch Rickey "rarely referred to his maize of notes" when he spoke here the other day. Muses Jim:

NEW YORK.—Mae West and Harry Green, the veteran comic, returned from England on the same ship. Miss West has written a play, and Green probably will be starred in it . . . They first met when they worked the same bill at the Majestic Theater in Albany, 38 years ago. Theater managers at that time were permitted to cancel vaudeville acts immediately after the first show. Miss West's act played the full engagement. Green was fired after his second show. He told the manager: "You can fire me after the first show, but not after the second." The comic then made six long-distance phone calls to his N. Y. lawyer. Then he finally arranged a settlement with the manager — agreeing to leave if the manager would pay the phone charges. "Okay," the manager agreed, "I'll pay for the six calls—but just for curosity, what did your lawyer say?" . . . "He said," Green confessed, "you could fire me."

Nat Harris, proprietor of The Harem, has been ill for a week. His manager phoned him to report on the Ritz Brothers, who are receiving $15,000 a week for their current engagement at the night club. "The Ritz Brothers are doing fine," the manager reported. "But it's too bad your'e sick." . . . "Well," said the night club owner, "better me than them."

Bob Hannegan, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Del Webb, coowner of the New York Yankees, have been friends for many years. But their acquisition of ball clubs made it difficult for them to see each other during the season, because their clubs are in different leagues. They finally evolved a system of arranging meetings without having to neglect their business. Both the Cardinals and the Yankees have extensive farm systems. And when a minor league team owned by the Cardinals is scheduled to play a minor league team owned by the Yankees, Webb sends his private plane to pick up Hannegan, and they attend the game.

Jerre Mangione, author of "The Ship and the Flame," worked in Sicily on a Guggenheim Fellowship. During his stay there he accompanied a State Department representative on a tour of the small villages, showing American educational films. One of the films was about the problem of rat extermination. "In Sicily we have no rat problem," a native told Mangione. "Our cats are so hungry that rats have a terrible time trying to survive. But this movie proves," said the Sicilian, enviously, "what a rich country yours must be, to afford a rat problem."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Spoiled Food Sold to Public

By Drew Pearson

The American people don't realize it, but an average of 20 tons of contaminated food is sold to the public every day in the year because the Food and Drug Administration has lost its authority to seize goods that spoil after reaching their destination.

What is even more alarming, the Government also has been stopped from confiscating deteriorated drugs unless it can be proved that the drugs lost their potency before delivery. For patients who may need a drug such as penicillin, this could mean the difference between life and death.

The Government was stripped of its power to seize spoiled goods by a decree of the Ninth Circuit Appeals Court in San Francisco when the Phelps-Dodge Co., a copper-mining firm, challenged the Government's authority to confiscate some macaroni that had spoiled in company warehouses after shipment from Colorado to Arizona.

The Circuit Court upheld Phelps-Dodge, ruled that the Government's authority ended after the goods reached their destination. Later, the Supreme Court refused to review the case.

House to Rescue

Immediately, Connecticut's Republican Congressman, William Miller, introduced a bill restoring the Food and Drug Administration's jurisdiction. This brought a hailstorm of protests from the Nation's millers, stirred up chiefly by E. W. Morrison of Denton, Tex., president of the Morrison Milling Co.

Morrison, himself, appeared before the Senate Commerce Committee in opposition to the bill after it had passed the House without a dissenting vote. He brought as reinforcements Leslie Ford of Shawnee, Okla., president of the Shawnee Milling Co., and Charles McClave of Great Falls, Mont., treasurer of Montana Flour Mills, Inc.

Morrison urged a watered-down substitute bill which would force the Government to prove "willful intent" or "gross negligence" before it could press criminal charges.

"There have been seizures," he argued, "because of the inclusion in shipments of flour or meal of infinitesimal quantities of so-called filth."

"I don't even want an infinitesimal part of rat droppings in food that I purchase," snapped back Senator Brien McMahon, Connecticut Democrat.

Stymied by Lobby

Nevertheless, the flour lobby has managed to obstruct the bill—largely through Senator (Pappy) O'Daniel of Texas, a former flour salesman, and Senator Ed Moore, millionaire Oklahoma oilman. Neither is running for reelection, and apparently they aren't concerned over public reaction. The bill is now stymied in committee and may not come up again in the closing rush of business. Meanwhile, the public is still buying tons of rotten food and bad drugs every day.

Pearson

Note 1—Senator O'Daniel is reported to be taking a $100,000-a-year job with a Texas flour mill after he leaves the Senate.

Note 2—What the flour lobbyists who appeared in opposition to the Food and Drug Administration didn't tell Congress is that all three have been convicted for possessing contaminated food. E. W. Morrison was fined $500 in Sherman, Tex., on November 26, 1946, for shipping corn meal, contaminated with rat droppings and insect fragments. Leslie Ford's Shawnee Milling Co. was fined $1000 in Oklahoma City April 26, 1947, for the same offense. McClave's Montana Flour Mills also was fined $2500 and costs in Cleveland, Ohio, April 30, 1948, for possessing flour contaminated with insect bits.

Capital Chaff

The Army is working on a sweeping new plan for promoting officers—patterned after the British system. If adopted, it would fix an officer's rank according to the job he holds . . . A Gallup Poll shows that a clear-cut majority of voters favor Federal aid to education and would be willing to pay more taxes to finance it . . . Senator Ralph Flanders of Vermont has written a stiff letter to Ben Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, and other big steel magnates urging them to reconsider their decision to block steel allocations for low-cost prefabricated housing . . . Flanders points out in his letter that the anti-inflation objective of the law passed by Congress last December, under which voluntary steel allocations are made, is being violated as long as Big Steel sells only to builders of conventional brick and wood-built houses and boycotts the prefab housing industry, which can turn out low-cost assembly-line homes within the means of veterans' pocketbooks.

Under the Dome

An interesting Senate row has developed over Senator Taft's monopoly of mimeographing facilities. Taft insists that his presidential campaign releases be given top priority over the statements of other Senators. However, what the Ohio presidential candidate doesn't know is that overworked employes in the mimeographing room have decided to give his campaign propaganda a Z priority on future work if Taft's office continues its bulldozing . . . Senator Vandenberg, long known for his fairness, has tarnished his reputation a bit in the battle over atomic energy. Truman leaned backward to appoint four Republicans out of the five commissioners but, even so, Vandenberg is not willing to confirm any of them for regular terms. All have done good jobs, but one man, David Lilienthal, is a Democrat . . . Senator Glen Taylor has lost two top-staff members since he became Henry Wallace's running mate—Jerry Spingarn and Charlie Wood.

Remember them

Let now the bugle call be heard . . . In soft, departing tone . . . And let Old Glory fly today . . . For those who sleep alone . . . For those who had the courage and . . . The will to go to war . . . That freedom and equality . . . Might live for evermore . . . Who never flinched or turned away . . . Before the toughest wall . . . Or looked for rest until at last . . . They gave their very all . . . Let us remember them today . . . With words that speak to God . . . And honor them with rifle shots . . . And flowers on the sod . . . And let us strive with all our strength . . . To guard our every gain . . . That everlasting peace may prove . . . They did not die in vain.

Latin inscription reads: "The Seal of the Treasury of North America."

Alexander Hamilton
First Secretary of the Treasury

THIS WEEK THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE

Treasury Department

AND ITS PEOPLE WHO MANAGE AMERICA'S FINANCES

The Treasury Department . . . had as its first Secretary . . . Alexander Hamilton . . . who took the oath of office in 1789. To Hamilton must go a large share of the credit for guiding the country through its early years. A believer in a strong central government, he was a key figure in setting up a sound fiscal program in the crucial early years of our country's youth.

The Treasury Department . . . has been the father of many government agencies now on their own, or under the jurisdiction of other departments. At one time or another the Treasury Department operated the Postal Service . . ran the General Land Office . . . supervised the construction of all Federal buildings.

The Treasury Department . . . wielded powerful economic weapons during the recent war. Treasury action halted enemy attempts to use American securities and currency looted in overrun countries. Printed currency was furnished the Allied Forces by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for use within captured areas. The Department was instrumental in setting up the forerunner of the Lend-Lease Program, long before the United States officially entered the conflict.

The Treasury Department . . . to execute its manifold duties . . . maintains field organizations in all of the States of the Union, and in most of the principal cities. The present scope of the Treasury Department's duties presents a sharp contrast to its Revolutionary War days when, at one time in Philadelphia, twenty-eight citizens were hired by Congress to sign and number currency bills as they came off the printing presses.

The Treasury Department . . . through its War Finance Program . . . made some eighty-five million individual citizens stockholders in their government through the sale of War Bonds. By giving of themselves unsparingly, the American people backed up their Armed Forces with the money necessary to win a war of global proportions.

● When the brilliant and youthful Alexander Hamilton became Secretary of the Treasury . . . at the age of 32 . . . he laid the groundwork for a nation's financial policy, which would endure to his everlasting glory. Many great Secretaries have followed in the footsteps of Hamilton . . . and during periods of prosperity and depression . . . peace and war . . . have given our country the financial guidance so vital to our democratic way of life.

● Over twenty thousand Washingtonians work for the Treasury Department today . . . or for one of its many subdivisions. As our country has grown . . . spreading across the continent . . . making its influence felt to an increasing degree beyond the seas . . . Treasury's responsibilities and duties have increased in proportion. Representatives of the Department are on duty in the major world capitals . . . and throughout the United States . . . carrying on the far-flung and manifold financial operations of our great country.

● The Hecht Company welcomes the opportunity of extending this salute to its thousands of friends in the Treasury Department . . . whose energy and effort are so vital to the preservation of our national economic welfare.
